Looking into a lake a person can't see the fish. But if he puts them in a gold-fish bowl, he can see them clearly and know how they looked in the lake.

A book is not a substitute for real experience, but it can serve as a reminder. The pictures and words in the 1964 SPIRIT should serve as hooks to hang memories on.

“a peopleshaped toomany-ness far too and will it tell us who we are and will it tell us why we dream and will it tell us how we drink crawl eat walk die fly do?”

"It is probable that the craft of building, as many other crafts beside, was derived from the Dunedain. But the Hobbits may have learned it direct from the Elves, the teachers of Men in their youth . . ."

—The Lord of the Rings

“ 'Taint the kind of Christmas where you feels like jumpin' around and singin' . . .

Maybe it's the way all of them should be . . . quiet and thoughtful . . .

Yeah sure . . . but you know, it was a year when we lost so much . . .

We didn't lose it, we just gave it back after borrowin' it for a while . . .”

—Pogo, December 25, 1963

"Friend, Excellency, come join our competition,
If you are practiced, as you seem to be.
While a man lives he wins no greater honor than footwork and the skill of hands can bring him.
Enter our games, then; ease your heart of trouble.
Your journey home is not far off, remember;
the ship is launched, the crew all primed for sea."

Touch down every morning (ten times!)
Not just now and then.
Give that chicken fat back to

No, don't be chicken again.
Push ups, every morning (ten times!)
Push ups, starting low.
Once more on the rise,
Nuts to the flabby guys,
Go you chicken fat, go away!
Go you chicken fat go!

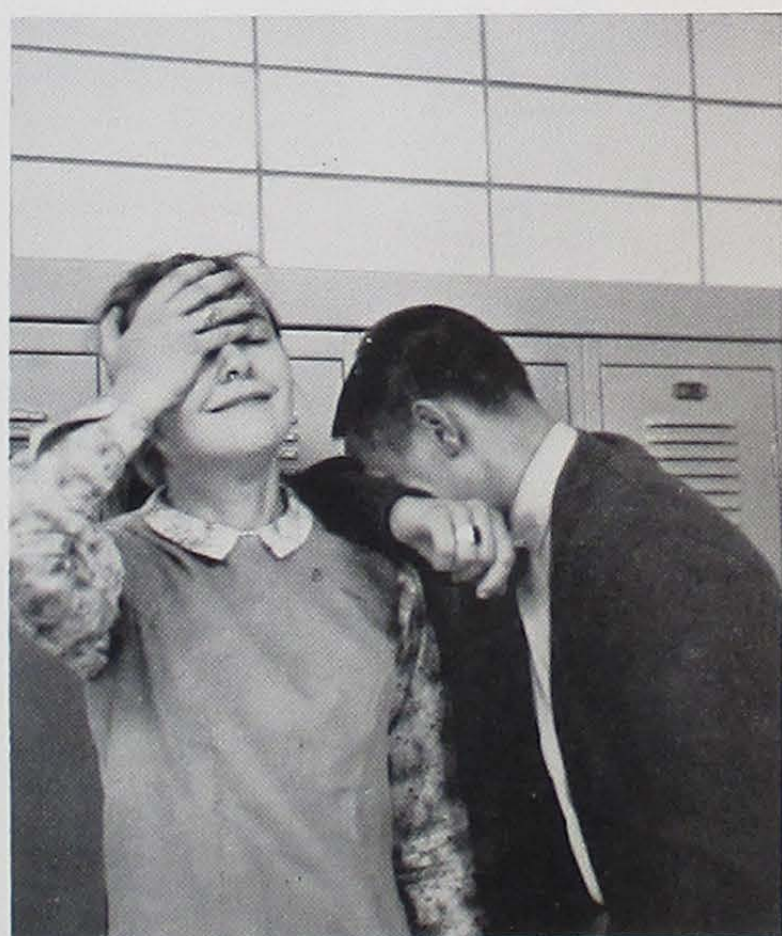

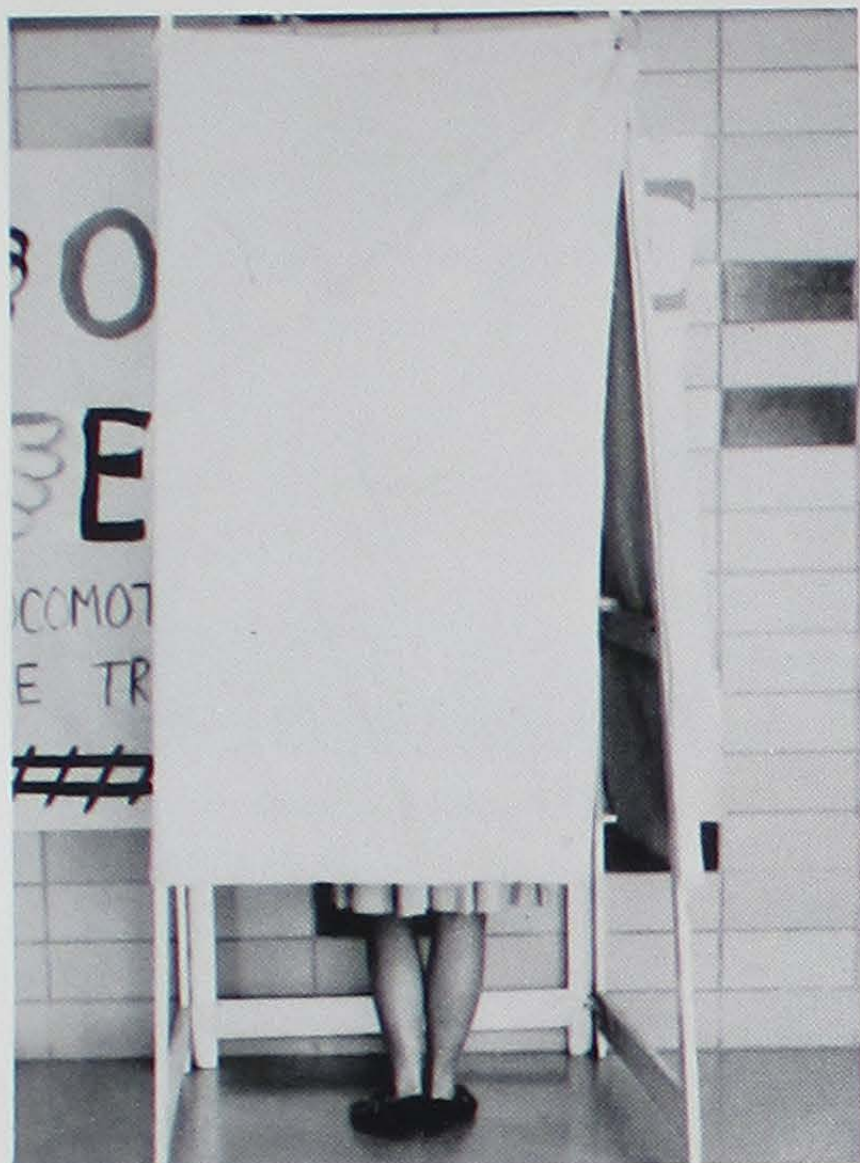

NOTICE TO CANDIDATES

1. Campaign expenditures should be under $20.
2. Posters may not go up until after the nominating assembly.
3. Posters are limited to 20 with no more than six larger than 8½" by 11" up at any time.
4. No posters may be stuck to the stage lectern, the auditorium curtains, or any painted walls. Masking tape is the only . . .

Aggressive: I, sir, if that nose were mine, I'd have it amputated—on the spot!

Descriptive: 'Tis a rock—a crag—a cape—
A cape? say rather, a peninsula!

Kindly: Ah, do you love the little birds
So much that when they come and sing to you,
You give them this to perch on?

Lyric: Hark—the horn
Of Roland calls to summon Charlemagne! . . .

Cyrano De Bergerac

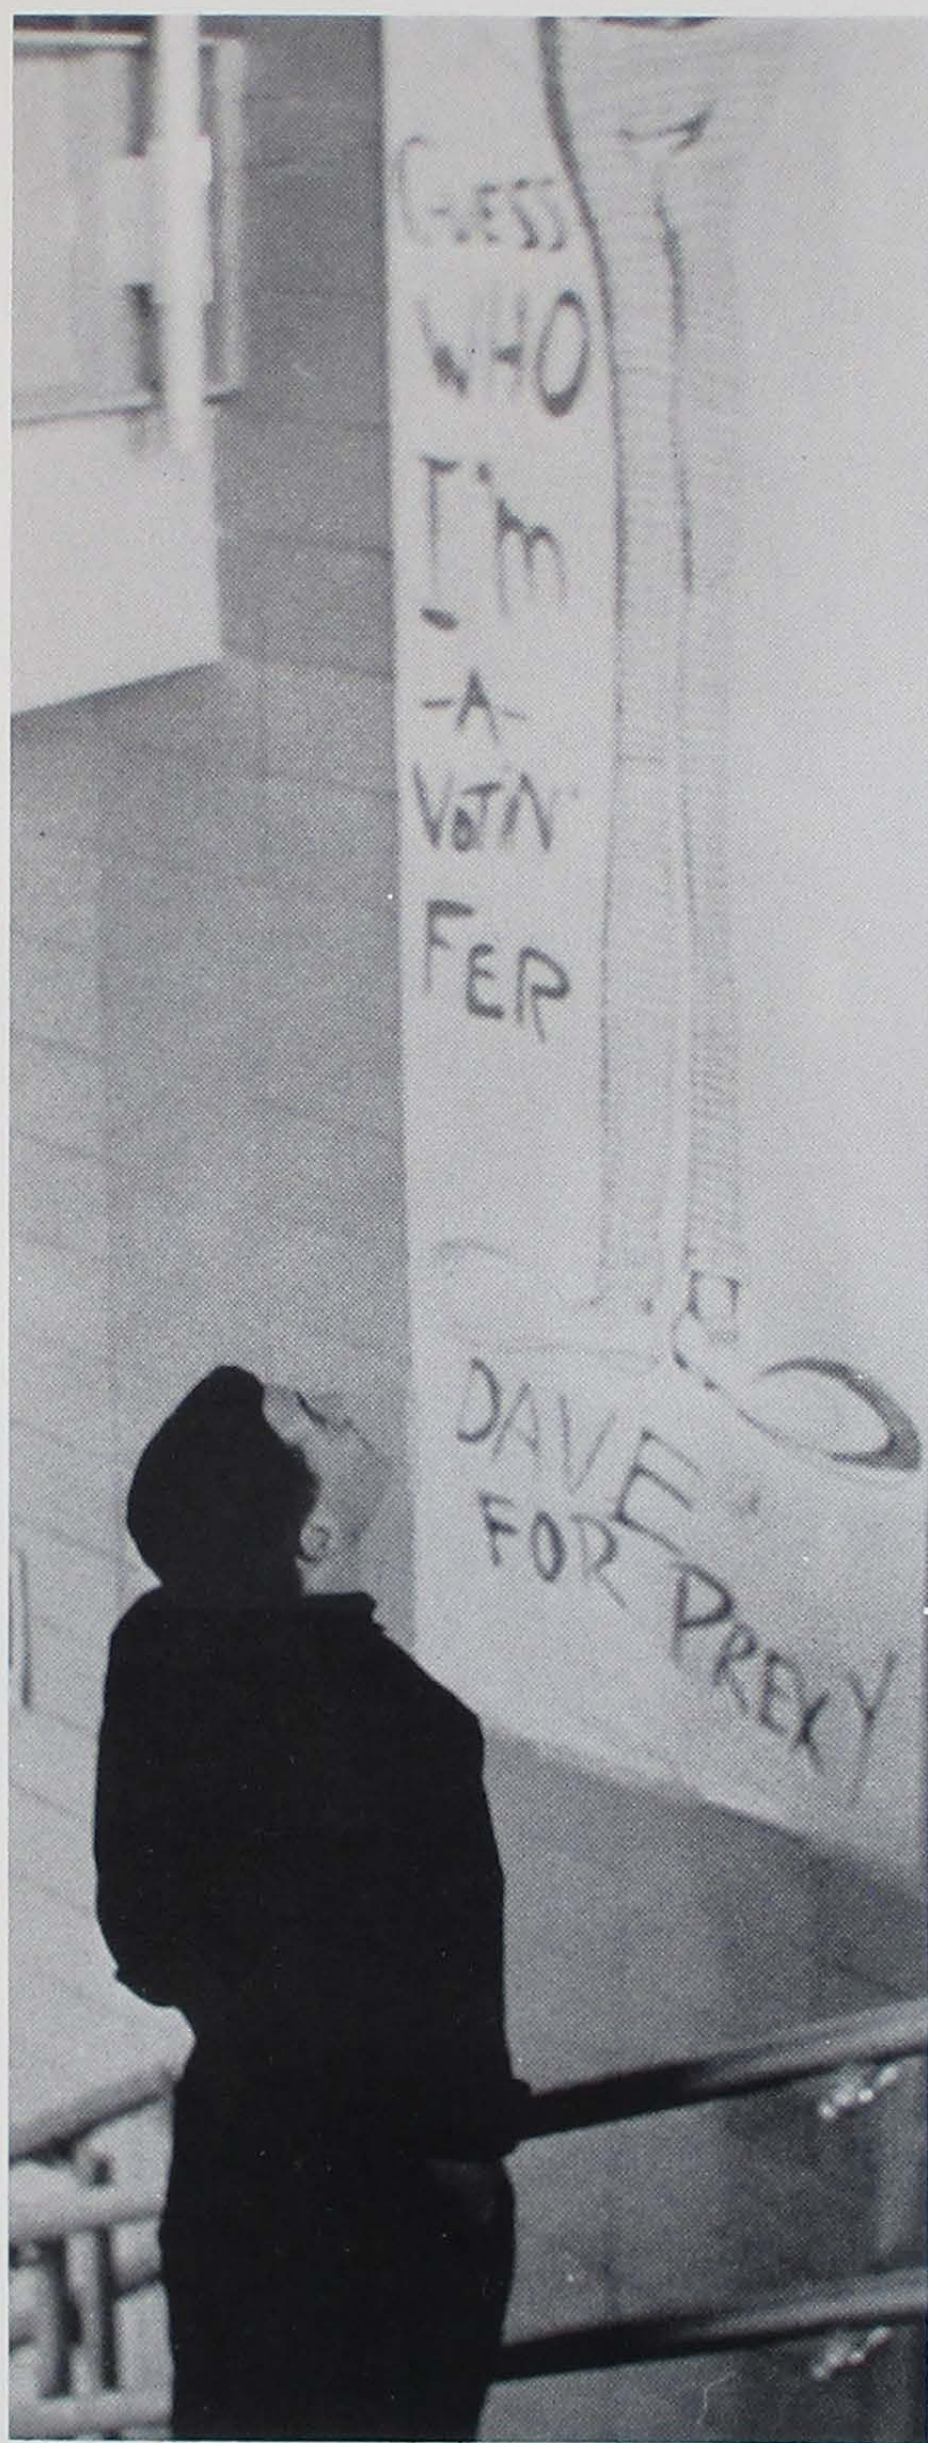

In paths untrodden,
In the growth by margins of pond-waters,
Escaped from the life that exhibits itself,
From all the standards hitherto publish'd—from the pleasures,
profits, eruditions, conformities,
Which too long I was offering to feed my soul;
Clear to me, now, standards not yet publish'd—clear to me that my Soul,
That the Soul of the man I speak for, feeds, rejoices most in comrades;
Here, by myself, away from the clank of the world,
Tallying and talk'd to here by tongues aromatic,
No longer abash'd—for in this secluded spot I can respond as I would not dare elsewhere . . .

To be a student is to accept the responsibilities of the world's most difficult and rewarding occupations. All that man has accomplished in thousands of years lies waiting to be discovered in a book. But books often leave the reader slightly removed from reality. There are things which must be experienced to be understood. To be deeply involved in life is often an inspiration to study, and to study is likewise often an inspiration to become deeply involved in life. Through the year the opportunity to share new found knowledge with the world and the opportunity for the world to reciprocate are mixed into a great chowder found in essence on the following pages.

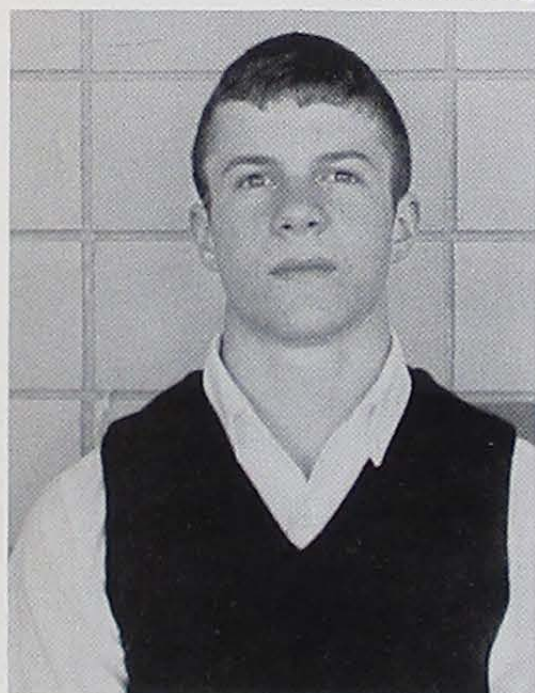

STUDENT BODY PRESIDENT CANDIDATES: Robert Dumenil

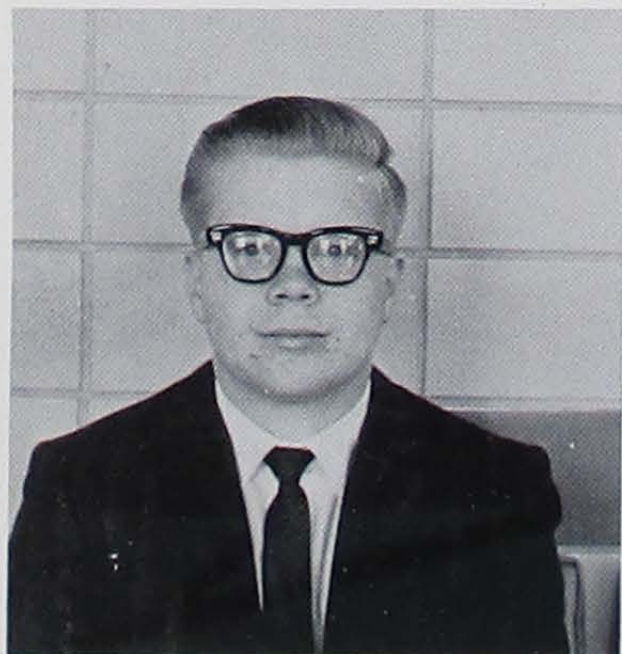

Jim Ingvaldstad

Bill Nordskog

Marc Woods

THE NOMINATING ASSEMBLY gave students an opportunity to sing out praises of their candidate.

Voters hear platforms, promises, platitudes

From crowded living rooms across the city of Ames there came the word; four hats were in the ring for the second semester, 1963 campaign.

At first it began rather quietly. Pressure groups converged on possible candidates in order to convert the shy, retiring students into honey-tongued orators, willing to shout their virtues to the world.

Then began the secret plans for the nominating assembly, where candidates traditionally vie for the most clever satirization of themselves. Nominees mounting the platform were Bob Dumenil, Jim Ingvaldstad, Bill Nordskog and Marc Woods. Next came the poster making and planning of speeches for the Friday assembly. And then it was over for all except one; Jim Ingvaldstad now had a job that would flavor everything he did for the next semester: Student Body President of AHS.

Government how's, why's taught at Hawkeye State

Last summer five boys from Ames High had their vacation broken up by attending Boys' State, sponsored by the American Legion. Chosen by a popular vote of their class, they spent several days learning about the various aspects of state and local government by conducting campaigns and elections and having their governor and other officials carrying out governmental business. Boys from all parts of Iowa took part in the convention held in Des Moines.

Later in the summer, Girls' State, also sponsored by the American Legion, was held in Cedar Falls on the State College of Iowa campus. The Ames representative was chosen by a class vote and an interview. She took part in the convention by running for office. The program of Girls' State was very similar to that of the boys.

ANN BARROW learned the complexities of American Government during Girls' State.

AMES' DELEGATES TO BOYS' STATE were Richard Black, Dave Schworm, John Burns, Rolfe Lowrie, Mike Schwartz.

A NEW UNIT, a new class, but the same old rush of registration.

With registration, the '63-'64 school year begins

August 23, 24, and 26 sounded the warning that vacation was drawing to a close. Students flocked to the school, bucking the unfinished road, to pick up the fatal yellow slip that determined the major part of their lives for the next semester. For many it meant trips back again and again and again to change the schedules. But at last the classes were balanced, most problems straightened out, and school underway.

The sophomores got their first taste of high school life at an orientation to help them get acquainted with the building, their teachers, and each other. Knowing what to expect, the sophomores breezed through the first day of school, having fewer problems than the upperclassmen.

REGISTRATION DAY was so hectic that two hands weren't enough.

EFFICIENT CAFETERIA PERSONNEL and gleaming new equipment took Ames High students off sack lunches. Personnel include: T Watson, C Kalsem, D Sparhoe, V Scandrett, I Matsen, I Adamson, C Erickson, P Scheurmann, M Cultip.

Cafeteria specializes in food

Before school started this year, grumbling was heard among the students about the split noon hour, and many dire predictions about its failure were made. After the first day of school, the prophecies seemed to be true, for many students dragged into class half an hour late. But by the end of the week, people became accustomed to gulping their meal in five minutes, and soon the only thing left to complain about was liver or mashed potatoes.

To accommodate the large number of students in the cafeteria, a closed noon hour with three sessions was recommended. Approximately a third of the students were assigned to a lunch session at 11:00, another third at 11:30, and the remaining third at 12:00. The system worked well with Mrs. Cutlip and her staff handling the food quickly and efficiently. They especially noted holidays; turkey was served on Thanksgiving, and cakes were decorated with victory bells before the Boone football game.

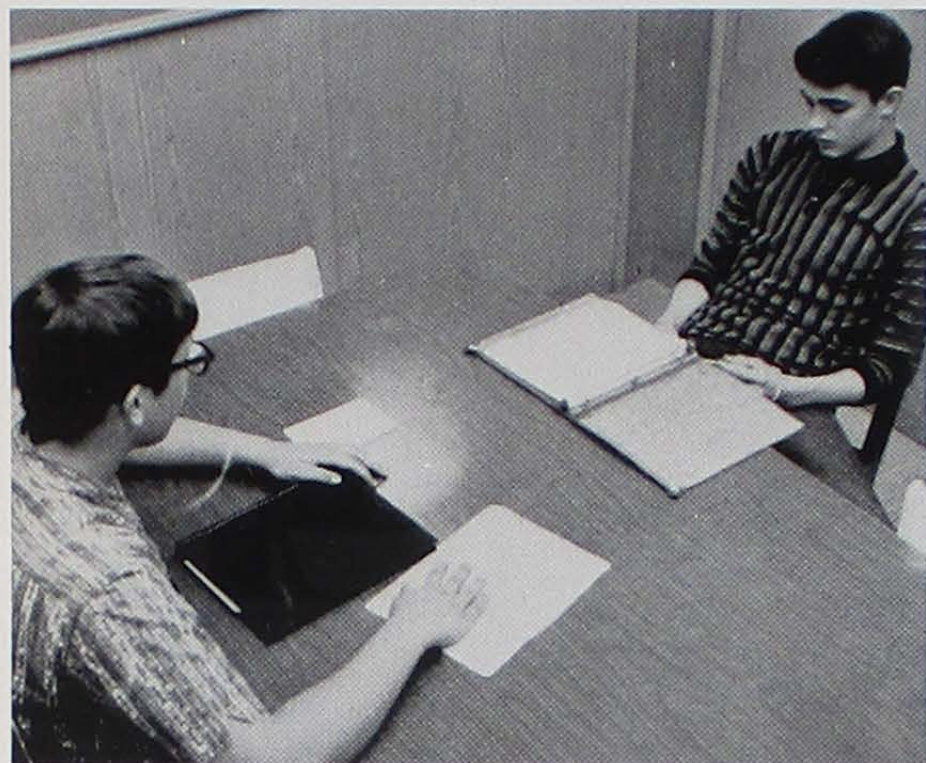

WITH SPOON IN HAND, Jim awaits his noon meal.

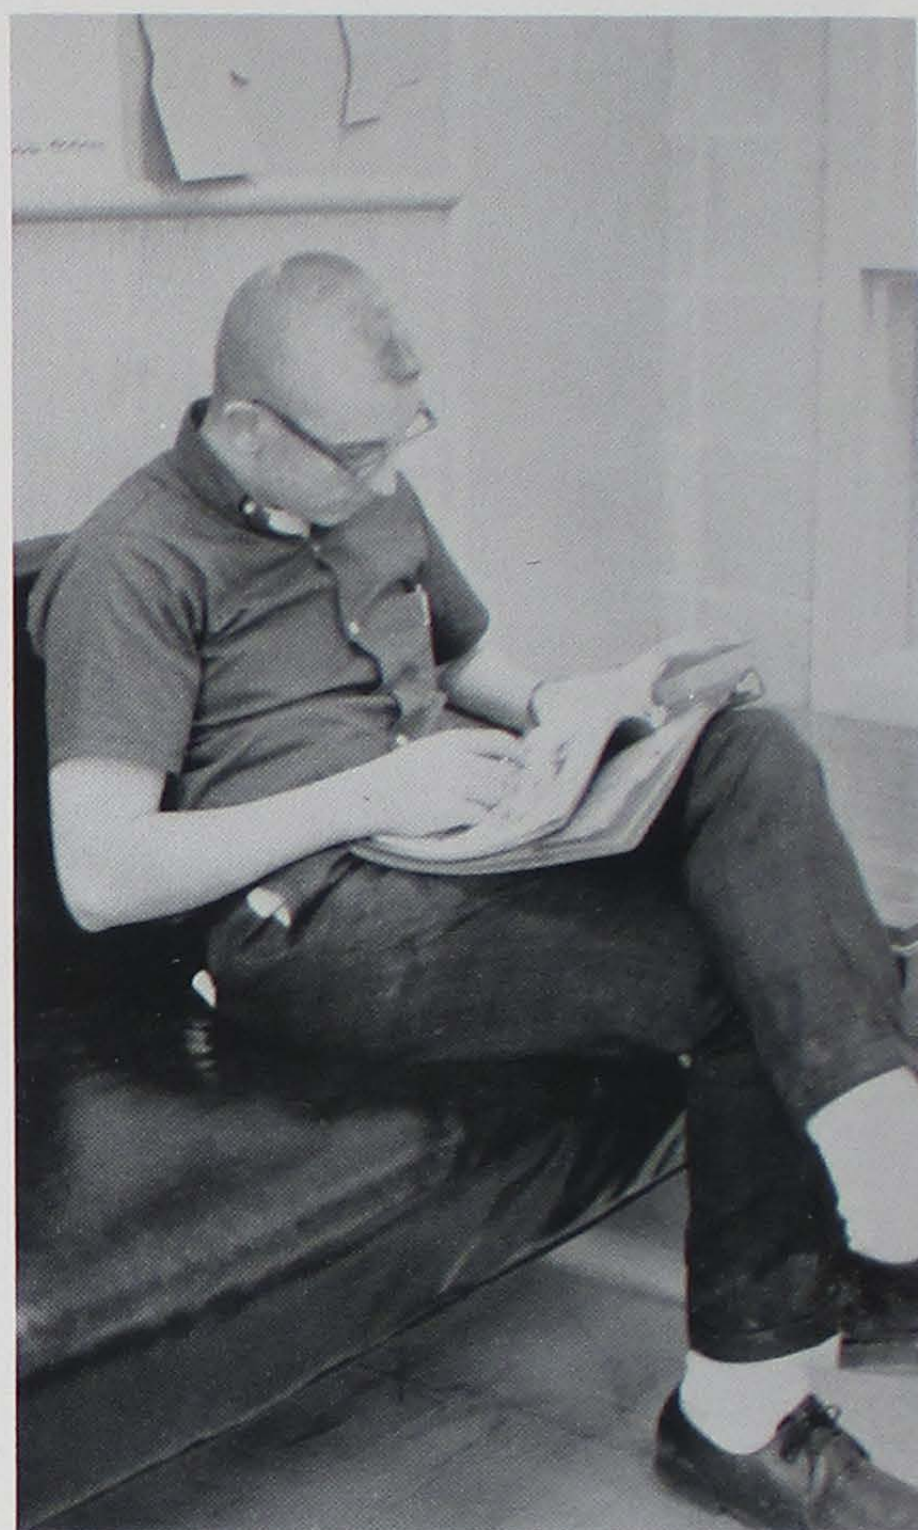

THE LINE seems mighty long for late arrivers who take their place at the very end.

BOOKS ARE ABANDONED each day for a tray of food.

CONFERENCE ROOMS for group studying were a feature of the new library.

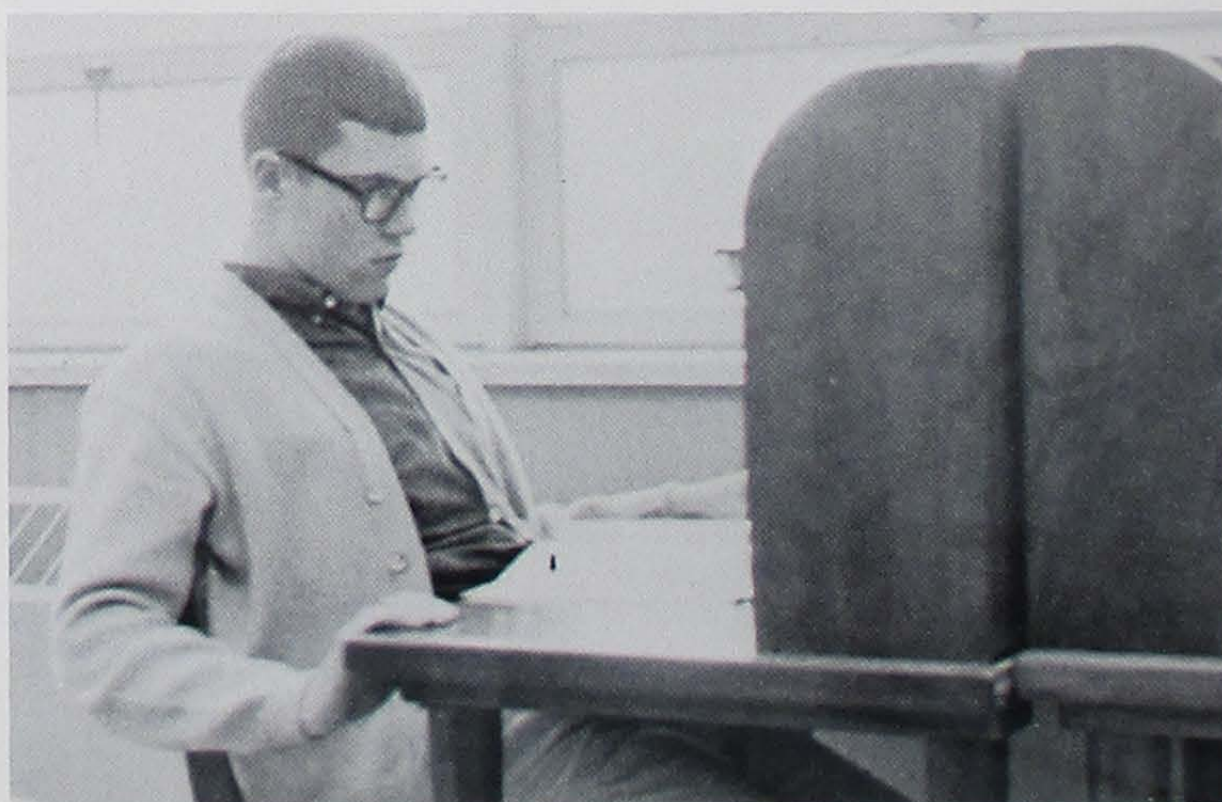

MAGAZINES were a pleasant relief from the tedium of study hall.

STUDYING in the library is illegal, but these girls got away with it.

THE LIBRARY provided many people with a quiet corner to read.

New library is filled with books and quietude

Coming back to school last fall, the juniors and seniors found that many of their old haunts had been moved. The library had been moved to new quarters in the third unit with the study hall taking over the old room. The two rooms were connected by a hallway which also led into cubby holes that were used for practicing speeches or any other private study. The library continued to add to its varied selections of books, paperbacks, and reference material to help the students in their classwork and to offer a diversion from homework. The library was occupied all day every day by students seeking an excellent haven for quiet research.

WITH BOOKS, purses and Pep Club jackets, there was hardly enough room to study.

Homecoming is launched

Homecoming week at Ames High was harrowing and hectic. The juniors scurried from room to room trying to solicit for mums. The Homecoming Committee was frantically working on the party and the election of a queen while the Pep Club was worrying about a skit for the assembly. The football team pondered about the game with Oskaloosa, and the band marched endlessly to get their formations perfectly attuned. But everything fell into place and Homecoming '63 was a huge success.

The actual festivities began on Friday morning with a pep rally at the Central auditorium. The cheerleaders and the pep band set the mood by leading the enthusiastic students in a frenzy of yelling. Things calmed down a bit as the Pep Club presented their skit, a takeoff on West Side Story. Donald K. Smith, former sports editor of the Ames Daily Tribune, offered some words of encouragement to the team and the student body. Then the exciting moment finally came. Barb Rosebrook was crowned as Homecoming queen with Carol Carmean and Cathy Carlson as attendants. The stage was set for a big night ahead.

"THE CYCS are gonna have their way tonight . . ." And the Indian feathers flew at the Homecoming game.

DANCING is fast becoming a spectator sport.

All systems are "go" for "Night In Orbit"

The big night finally arrived. At 7:30 the team rushed onto the field amid the cheers of the crowd. They left in the same fashion after breaking a three year Homecoming losing streak. The Little Cyclones completely dominated play and soundly defeated the Oskaloosa Indians 13 to 0. The queen and her attendants were presented at half time, as the band gave another excellent performance.

With victory in the air, the exuberant migration to the high school began. The celestial theme of "Night in Orbit" was carried out in the decorations that turned the everyday cafeteria into a festive dance floor. The music of the Rogues filled the air, as the old grads and present students mingled. The night was over all too soon as Homecoming 1963 became a memory.

THE ROGUES launched the "Night in Orbit" with music that was out of this world.

Students view tomorrow

Planning for the future was the keynote to College and Career Nights. College Night gave interested students the chance to meet representatives from various campuses in the area and ask questions concerning tuition, fees, and courses offered. All students attended Career Night, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club. Guest speakers from all walks of life told the students about the advantages and rewards of their chosen professions.

Back to School Night resembled a grade school PTA meeting, for the parents were allowed to wander the halls and compare notes with the teachers on their offspring's progress.

THE ENGLISH DEPARTMENT presented a special program at Back to School Night. Here parents learned about the high school English program and were entertained at the same time.

PLANNING AND EXECUTING CAREER NIGHT meant much paperwork and legwork for the committee in command.

PROFESSOR HOLMES gave students valuable advice on planning for the future.

MEET THE TEACHERS or Meet the Parents could be names given to Back-to-School Night where parents and teachers had a chance to do just that.

THE POLIO DRIVE brought thousands of envelopes to be stuffed, stamped, licked, and mailed.

Students give gifts, time

Taking time out from Christmas shopping and the last minute rush before the holiday season, the Boys' Club and Girl Reserves cabinets boarded a bus to visit the Story County Home. They went bearing gifts, not quite gold, frankincense, and myrrh, but gifts picked out by the home-room representatives.

Another project undertaken by the Girl Reserves and Boys' Club was the support of the Teens Against Polio Drive. Instead of canvassing the town door to door, the groups helped mail out propaganda on the drive and sent little plastic boxes to all the schools in town to collect pennies and dimes for the campaign.

Frostfire highlights Christmas vacation

FROSTFIRE. The ornate silver invitations and shining posters conjured up a conflicting image of winter and ice counteracted by light and warmth. The senior girls' Christmas formal became the topic of conversation that prevailed in the halls prior to Christmas vacation.

After the flurry of dress selecting, shoe dyeing, corsage ordering, and last minute telephone calling, the eve of the dance arrived. Following the rounds of pre-party parties, the students and alums flocked to the Union. Red lights and silver streamers decked the Sunroom as the Frosty Four provided background music, with two Ames High graduates proving that good voices do come from Ames. The clock struck the magic hour of twelve, the music faded, and this highlight of the Christmas season passed into oblivion.

IT WAS A WELCOME BREAK to just stand and listen.

A PIANO and an empty room await the enchanted evening.

Assemblies bring students together

Assemblies are given to supplement book learning. They present ideas, enlarge our field of thought. Like frosting on a cake, like butter on bread, they make school life richer and more enjoyable. But the problems assemblies presented could not be overlooked. Transportation, time taken from classes, and what to do with the early-birders were just a few of the main drawbacks. But these wrinkles were ironed out and several good programs were presented.

The welcoming assembly, homecoming, and pep rallies held throughout the year bound tighter the ties each student had with the school. The music department displayed its many talented participants in programs of singing and concerts by the bands and orchestra. Probably the most memorable assembly was a concert given by Dick Shory, a graduate of Ames High, and his band. His interesting style and arrangements captured the imagination of all students. Though they seemed few and far between, the assemblies covered a wide range of interests which appealed to most students.

DICK SCHORY leads his percussionists, listening for every gonging cymbal and tingling triangle.

THE FINAL TALLYING of votes brought Dennis Ostrem a difficult but rewarding job.

Issues, politics fly

For seventeen weeks the student government of Ames High flows along through a subterranean cavern performing its duties relatively unnoticed by the humdrum multitude. Then all at once AHS becomes a hot-bed of dissension and unrest. The issues appear in a semesterly ground hog day, see their shadows, and dive underground within two weeks. But this brief period inspires an amazing interest in government and politics.

Dennis Ostrem, David Schworm, and Margaret Shepherd ran spirited campaigns for a week, and after all the activity subsided, Dennis was inaugurated second semester Student Body President. Someone rubbed the lamp, and politics disappeared from the scene in an instant. In the scattered ashes of platforms and speeches remained ideas that hopefully have made AHS a better place in which to study and teach.

ELECTED SPIRIT SWEETHEART was Shirlee Smith, with attendants Cindy Craig and Katy Jo Rigg.

PALM TREES and a quiet pool formed an oasis in a desert of semester tests.

Staff provides an oasis

The SPIRIT Dance comes somewhere in between semester tests and the last deadline. The dance is somewhat overshadowed by these events; the junior staff rather noisily trips over it as the senior staff sits idly by stirring a cup of memories. The juniors suffer a collective nervous breakdown over the first problem that presents itself: the need for a theme. Over the years an unspoken competition has grown up in the area of names for the dance. Two years ago it was simply called "A Touch of Blue." This was easy to spell and say, not to mention easy to decorate for. In 1963, a great leap forward was made to "Carrousel," difficult to spell and likewise to decorate. But the '64 juniors met the challenge and discovered a name that was not only impossible to spell and say but also involved the problem of turning the cafeteria into a desert oasis. "Scheherazade" kept up the tradition of the SPIRIT Dance, being a highlight of the social year.

FREE REFRESHMENTS were a popular attraction at "Scheherazade."

SPIRIT SWEETHEART CANDIDATES were: C Craig, L Bergland, S Smith, M Quam, A Keisler, B Hiserote, K Rigg, C Carlson, J Henrikson.

FRIENDSHIP WEEK provided an opportunity for students to compare and share ideas and goals.

TEACHERS had their chance to meet Dr. Remley at an informal reception.

Students reshuffle values

Just as every house needs to be redecorated or needs its furniture rearranged to break monotony and improve appearance, everyone's personal house needs a long look and a reshuffling of values. Ames High realizes this need and sets aside the time for redecorating during Friendship Week, sponsored by the Girl Reserves and Boys' Club. Attitudes and relationships with other students are examined, sometimes refinished or given a new place in the person's inner home.

The interior decorator called in to give advice this year was Dr. E. W. Remley of San Francisco. Dr. Remley was no stranger to Ames or to many Ames High students, having been pastor of the Collegiate Presbyterian Church from 1951 to 1960. The theme of his lectures was "The Adventurous Life" with daily food for thought being provided in the topics "I-Strain," "Fear of Sanity," and "The Big Ballgame." Class forums and private conferences rounded out the picture of Friendship Week.

DR. REMLEY developed the theme of "The Adventurous Life."

STUDENT FORUMS brought out individual and group problems.

The sun smiles — and winter melts away

After an extended vacation, the sun comes back on the job fresh and full of a gentle vitality. Suddenly the earth is a big puddle, rippled by warm breezes. The world is so glad to be warm again that it turns green with enthusiasm. All at once the school year is almost over. The slow uphill journey of the first few months has crossed the divide, and the student body slides gleefully down the other side with increasing speed. Track, tennis, and golf begin in earnest, and the gym classes move out of the basement for good. In a few short weeks, school is out, and no one can resist a touch of nostalgia for a year that now seems but a fleeting moment.

The only people for whom spring comes too soon are the members of Junior Exec. A good portion of their free time in the past year has been spent in preparing for the event which now draws near, the Prom. Thoreau once said that "the mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation." As prom time draws near, this is certainly the position of many Ames High girls. However, even the smallest and most delicate of mothers finds strength to push, threaten, and bully her shy and nervous six foot, two-hundred pound football playing son, and so the prom is usually quite well attended. It is the big social event of the year for juniors and seniors. Highlighted by a dinner, entertainment, and dancing, it provided many unforgettable moments.

Academics

"With a little more deliberation in the choice of their pursuits, all men would perhaps become essentially students and observers, for certainly their nature and destiny are interesting to all alike. In accumulating property for ourselves or our posterity, in founding a family or a state, or acquiring fame, even, we are mortal; but in dealing with truth we are immortal, and need fear no change or accident." . . . Walden.

Amid the flurry of joining, organizing, and promoting that is the recipient of most of the publicity emitted from Ames High, it is sometimes difficult to perceive the presence of that rare species known as the student. Surprisingly enough, they are quite common. They are inconspicuous because of a natural independence, which both leads and pushes them forward. Everyone becomes a student at some time during his three year stay, and if only for a moment, experiences the joy resulting from opening the door of truth enough to catch even the faintest glimmer of the light inside. Whether it be the understanding of a star, a planet, a cell, or a soul, a glimpse of truth is unforgettable, and acts like a magnet upon the mind of the observer.

Administration innovates 7-period school day

TOP CALIBER EDUCATION was provided by Walter Hetzel, Superintendent of Schools, and Herbert Adams, Principal of Ames High School.

The principal of a high school has a job akin to that of the beekeeper who must keep the bees in the hive and at the same time leave the bee's freedom to live naturally completely undisturbed. He must ride herd on an institution that is progressing slowly forward with a good deal of Brownian type motion thrown in for spice. He takes over for two thousand parents during the day and is responsible to twenty thousand people of the community. Such a man is Herbert Adams, principal of Ames Senior High School.

Twenty years ago Mr. Adams came to Ames from La Mars, Iowa, to take over the duties of the principal of AHS. With his leadership and supervision, the school has grown in this time to become one of the greatest high schools in the nation.

The members of the "post-war baby boom," as they are known in adult circles, have caused a great deal of trouble for the citizens of Ames, and particularly those citizens who are counted among the members of the School board, and more particularly Mr. Hetzel, Superintendent of the Ames Public Schools. Their duties center around providing thirteen years of top-caliber education for every child in Ames. With the tremendous population increase, the schools quickly overflow, and new ones are needed right and left. Consequently a new high school has been a major task for the board. With the new swimming pool and later the auditorium and gym, the board will be able to relax and build a few elementary schools until they need the next high school.

THE PAST ENDURES.

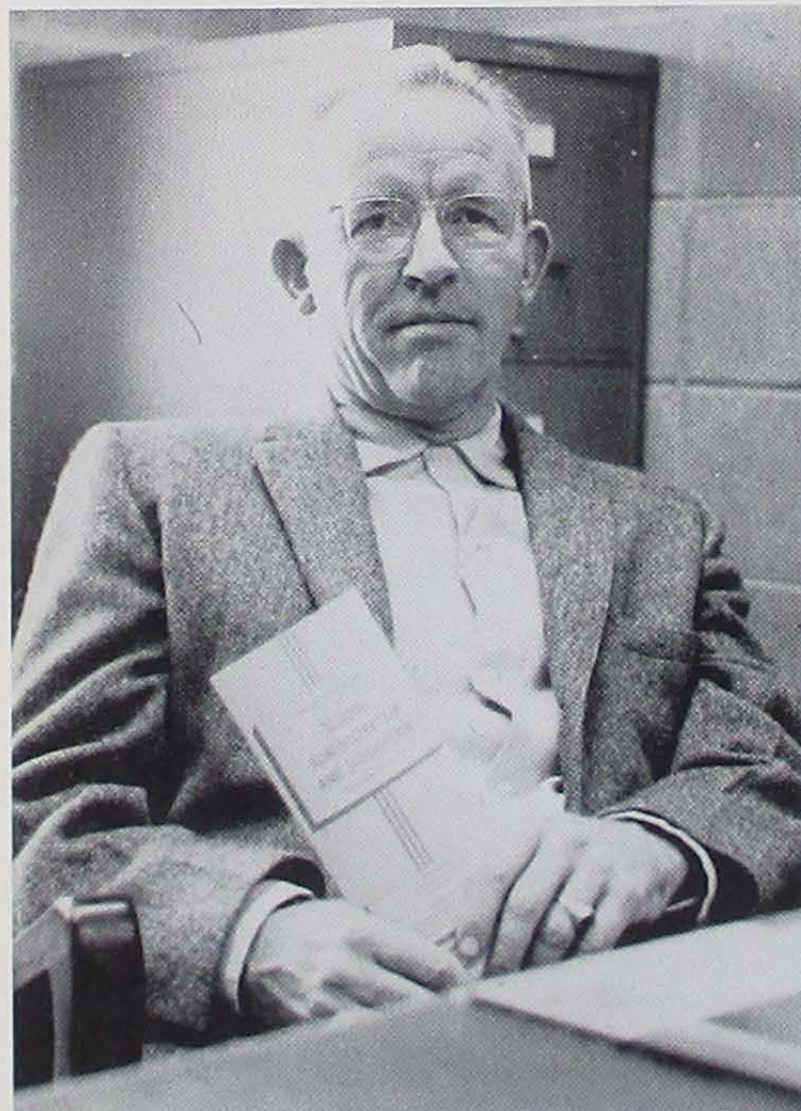

THROUGHOUT THE SCHOOL YEAR daily announcements kept the students in touch with reality.

MEMBERS OF THE SCHOOL BOARD include: Mr. McNabb Jr., Mr. Howell, Sec., Mrs. Singer, Mr. Adams, Mr. Hetzel, Mr. Underhill, Pres., Mr. La Velle, Treas., Mr. Moorhead, Adm. Asst., Mrs. Buck, Mr. Fellingner, Mr. Payer.

A FAMILIAR FACE to all latecomers, schedule changers, and pranksters is that of Mr. Ritland's.

MRS. WHITNEY heads the counseling staff at Ames High.

Office simulates Grand Central Station

Next door neighbors of Mr. Adams are Mr. Ritland and Mrs. Whitney. From their offices come a major part of the executive actions necessary to administrate the miniature community which is rushing about its business all around them. Through their offices pass every possible type of situation.

Among the official duties of Mr. Everett Ritland, Vice-Principal, are Director of Adult Education and Director of Summer School and Driver Education. He and Mr. Adams share their daytime family and its problems. The third office down the line contains Mrs. Whitney. The sign above her door says "Co-ordinator of Guidance Services for the Ames School District and Senior Girls' Advisor."

The big office is the home of Mrs. Flack, Mrs. Carr, and Miss Dusso. They handle the mass of paperwork that is involved in running a high school.

Together all these people compose the group with the ominous sounding name, administration.

Languages discipline minds

The plot thickens as the detective sorts through his clues. He checks them again, changing their order, watching for small discrepancies. One last change and—there. Everything fits in perfectly. The mystery is solved.

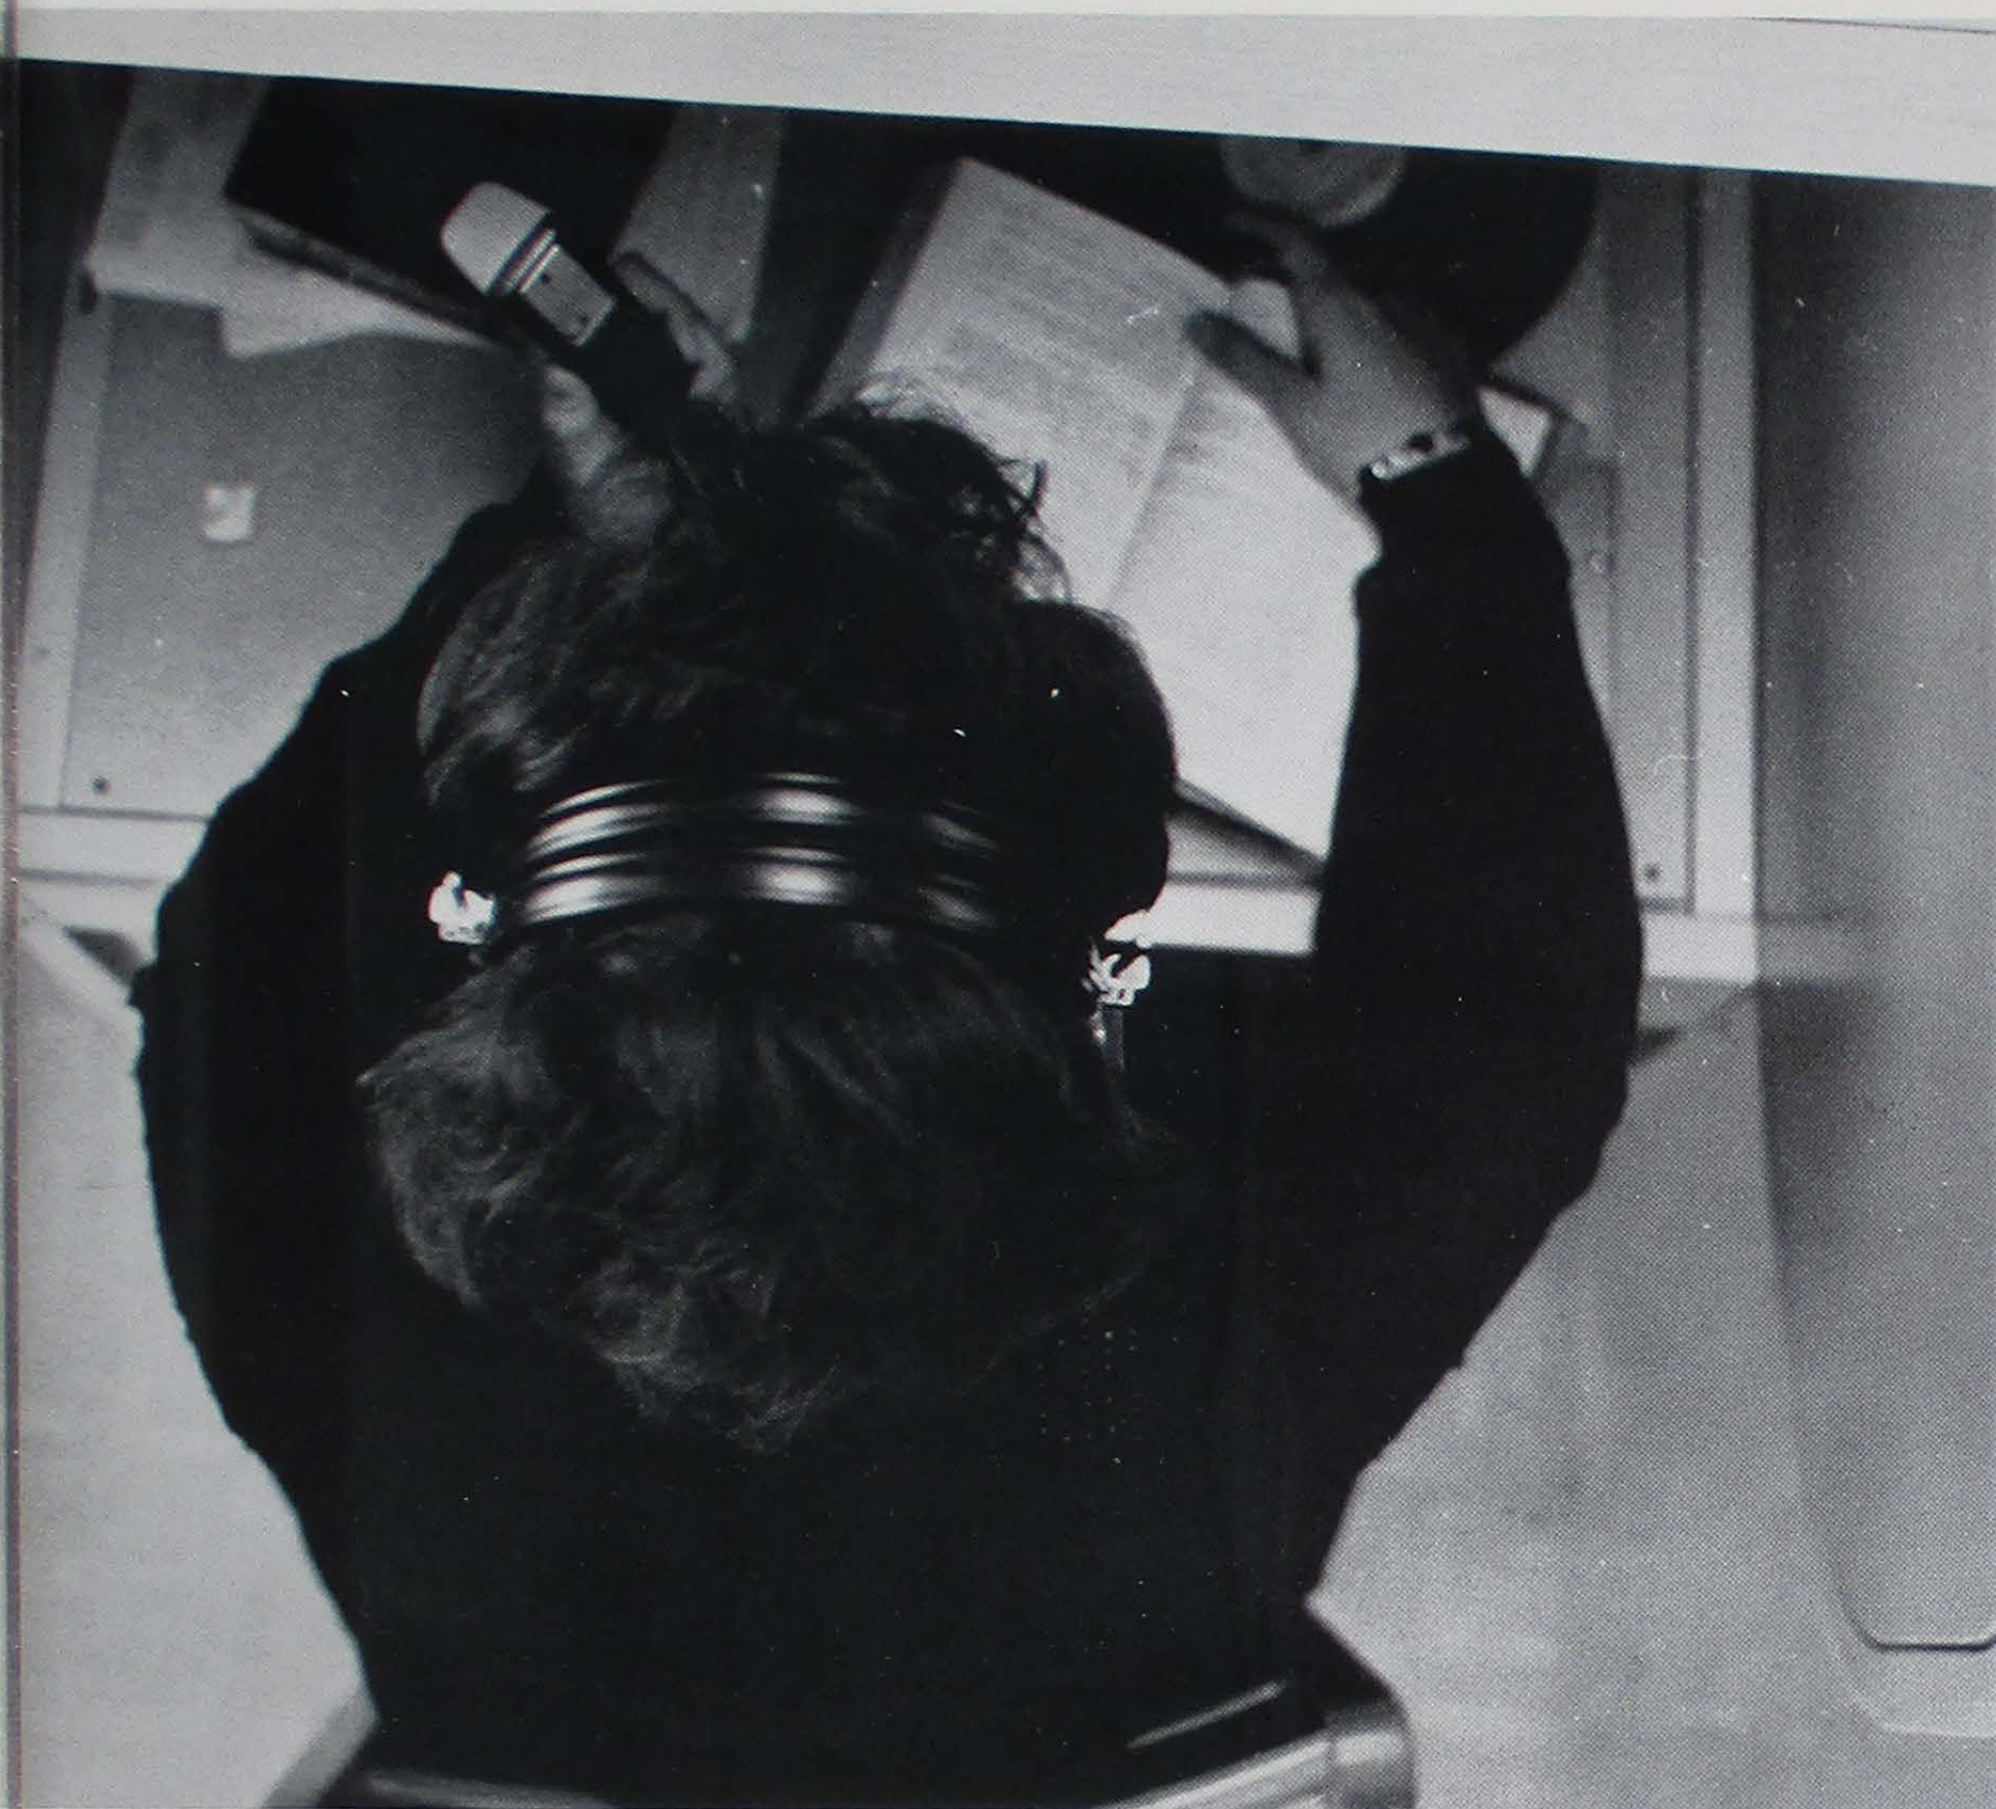

The actor studies his script. The emphasis should go on this word. Use gestures here and here. Move on this line. Be motionless while these lines are given. The whole thing must go smoothly.

The psychiatrist eyes his newest patient keenly. What is his problem? What does he believe? How does he think? What are his likes, his dislikes? After some serious study, the psychiatrist learns the answers to his questions.

Although not everybody is a detective, a psychiatrist, or an actor, many students at Ames High are a little of each while taking French, German, Spanish, or Latin. As a detective, they put together phrases and sentences in their written work. As an actor, they use the sentences in conversation. As a psychiatrist, they learn about the people who use the language. Being able to master all three roles makes the study of language very rewarding.

“You can’t help respecting anybody who can spell TUESDAY, even if he can’t spell it right.” ... A. A. Milne

All men seek to know themselves. It is a quest that must be carried on without sight, sound, taste, or smell. The answer to the mystery of life lies lurking in the shadows of the mind, waiting to outwit even the most crafty hunter. But from every unsuccessful chase the hunter learns something of the quarry, and tries to record it in the journal of truth. That he may understand past efforts and perhaps make entries of his own, a course in English is required each year at Ames High; Sophomore English, American Lit for Juniors, and World Lit, Communications Skills, English Lit, Developmental Reading or Journalism for Seniors. Past and future world affairs make up History curriculum

"Never had there been a dawn like this. In the murky gray light, in majestic fearful grandeur, the great Allied Fleet" . . .—The Longest Day.

And so another tarnished and worn bit of the past is scooped out of its dusty corner and brought to light, so that we may not walk the same road twice. It could be said that the social sciences require less and offer more than any other field of study.

A million years, a thousand kings, and a thousand civilizations fly by in hours. Seven teachers extract the purest and most distilled essence of experience from a source as big as the earth and as old as time. American History, International Relations, American Government, and World History are the result. The value of the social sciences is proven; thus American History and American Government wipe a little of the dust off every student's window to the past. The others are elective, with a bit more philosophy added to spice the mulligan stew that is history.

Science provides the path to understanding

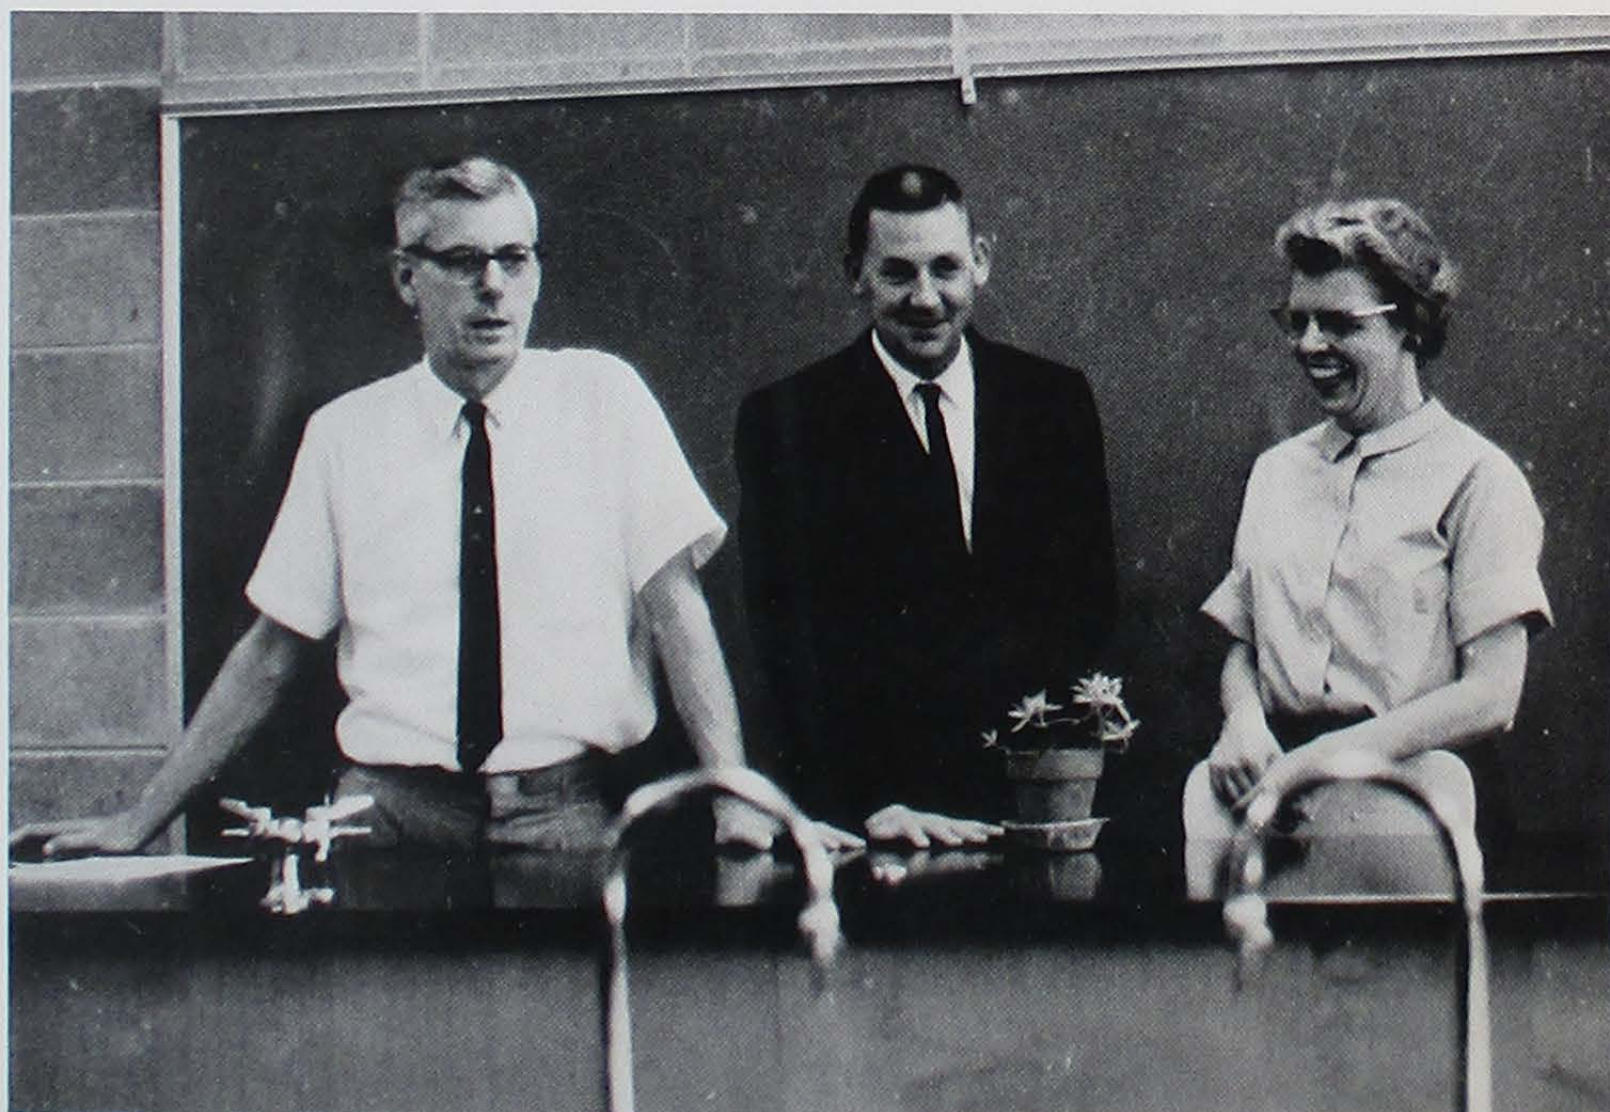

BILL IS FINDING that a microscope brings out the beasties in things.

A dark, narrow path twists and turns through the densely packed trees of a gigantic forest. Students view this trail, contemplating their fate if they follow it or avoid it completely. The curious, the hard-working, the pioneers stride confidently into the complex maze, the challenging world of science. For some the trail seems endless, with the path blocked by low-hanging trees and thorny bushes. But crawling into the light of understanding makes the tedious journey worthwhile.

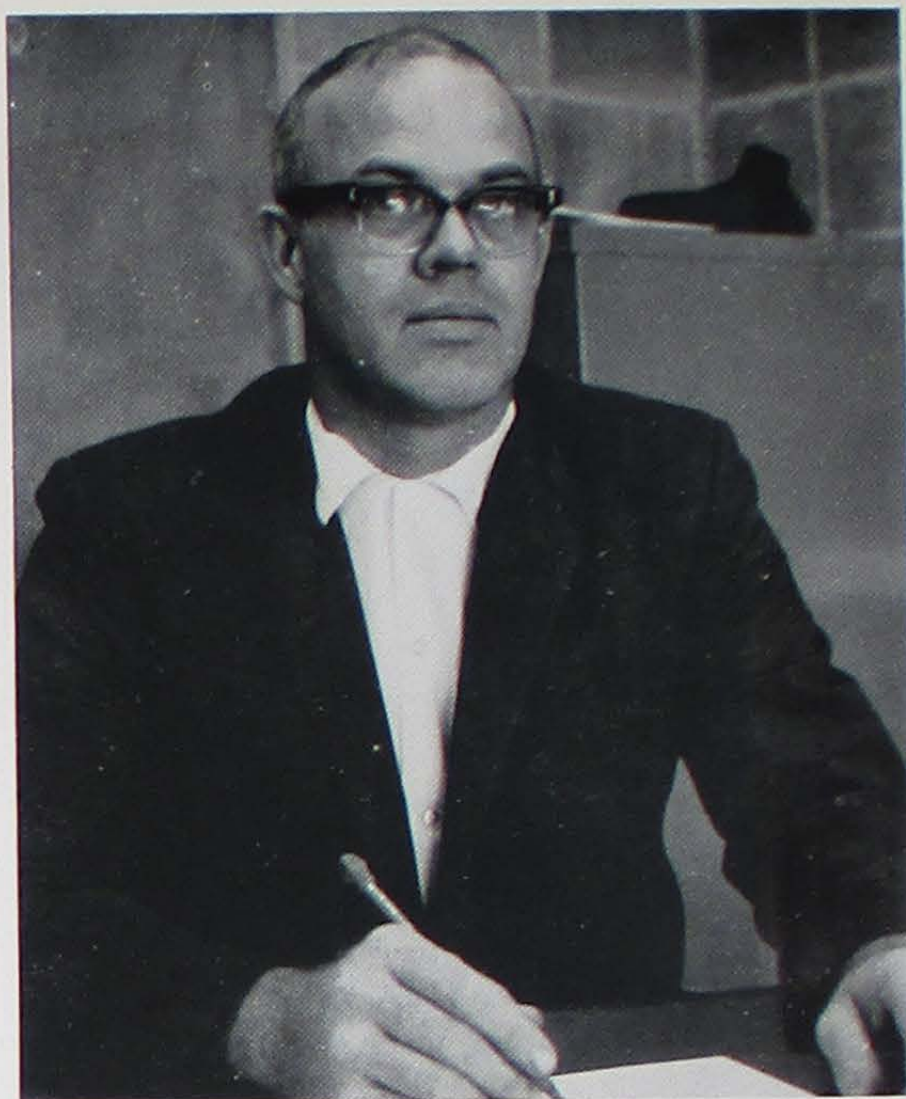

This path for Ames High students consists of three distinct phases: biology, physics, and chemistry. Six guides are willing to lead the expedition.

A dead grasshopper, a well-used metric ruler, or a broken test tube may be the only tangible evidence that anyone has followed the path. But the intangible, a better understanding of the hows and whys of our amazing world, is a silent tribute to the science department at AHS.

ALGEBRA is a challenging set of complexities; yet it seems so simple when Mr. Albertson shows you the answer.

New teaching methods improve Math curriculum

The two highest achievements and greatest pleasures of man lie in discovery and creation: the sciences and the arts. Perhaps mathematics could be called a nexus between the two. The musician invents his scale and rhythm patterns and then sets out to explore the possibilities of his creation: the mathematician creates a number systems and basic postulates and likewise proceeds to investigate his creation.

Sophomores, one and all, meet geometry. This is usually explained as a subject to "teach the student how to think," but in a broader sense it serves as an introduction to thought beyond the fettering chains of practicality. The musicians must learn the rules, forms and types of composition. In order for the young math student to become acquainted with the rules and forms that govern his study, the Algebra II student reviews the work of mathematicians that lived a thousand years ago. Trigonometry and analytical geometry begin to approach the more newly built areas known as higher mathematics. Honors Algebra and Business Math are available and popular.

This year AHS participated in a five-state experiment designed to determine the effectiveness of modern teaching methods in mathematics.

Fine Arts courses encourage student creativity

"One does not learn to know nature and works of art if they are finished; in order to comprehend them somewhat one must surprise them while they are still being formed."—Goethe

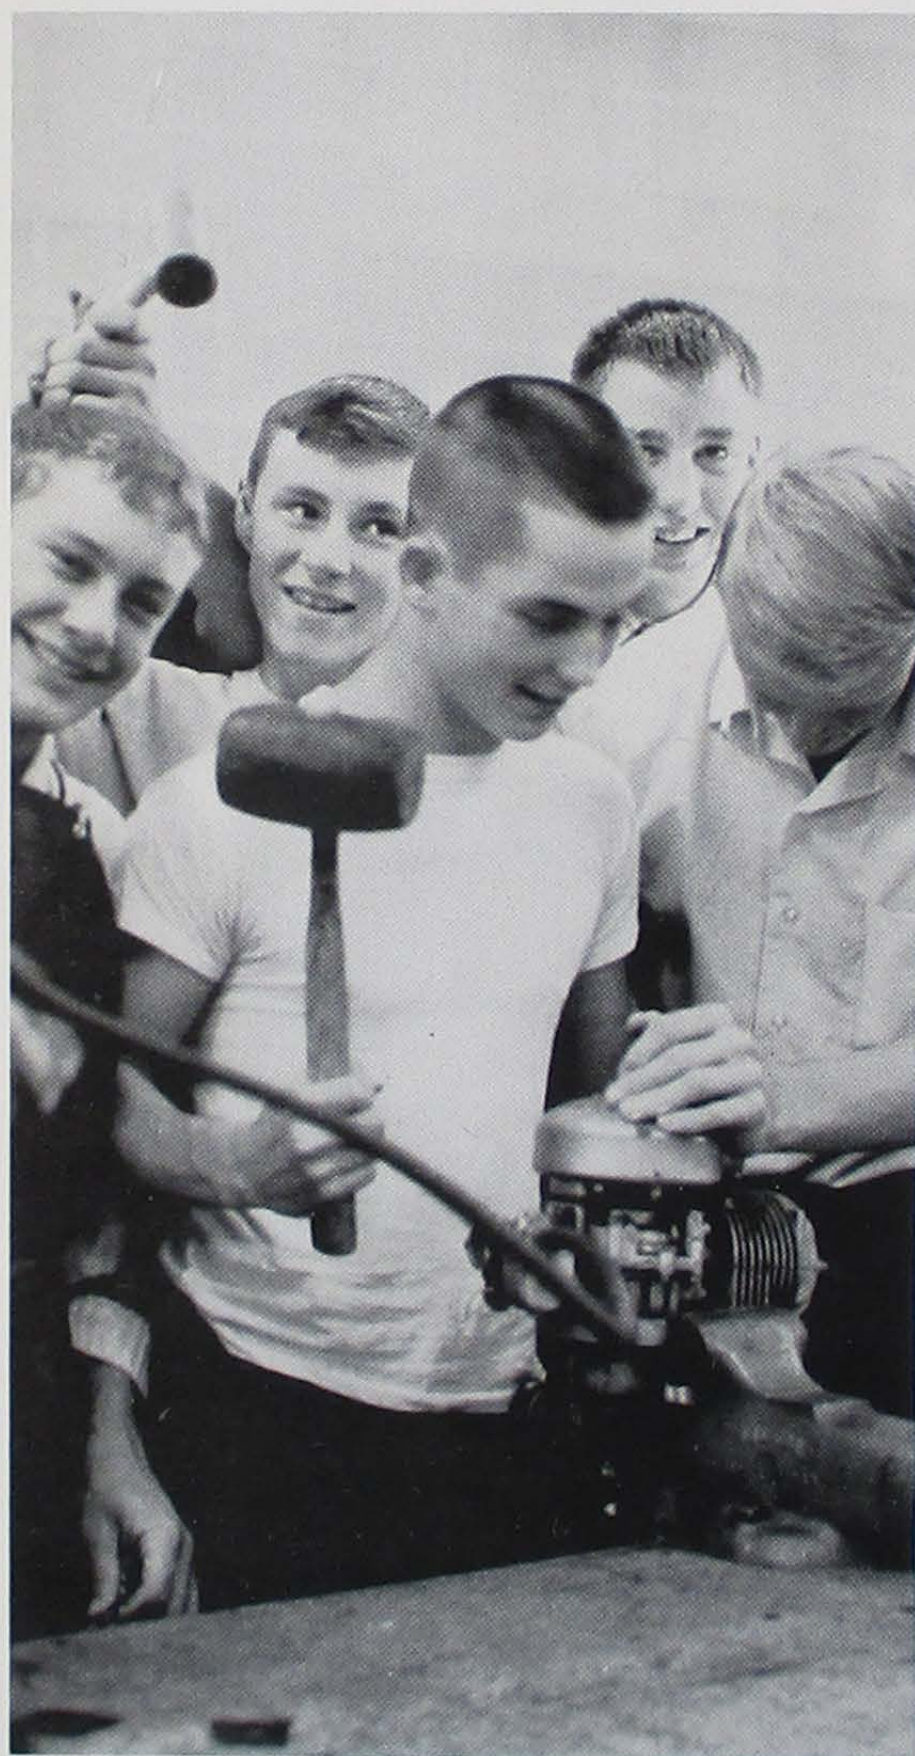

To this end instruction in instrumental music, art, and drama is included in the curriculum at AHS. The variety of offshoots from these basic categories is limitless, depending only on the enthusiasm of the participants.

With the coming of the phonograph, television, and radio, the fine arts have opened up a new world of creativity and understanding in which "longhair" is becoming a compliment. At Ames High the fine arts classes are the rule rather than the exception.

Job preparation is the keynote

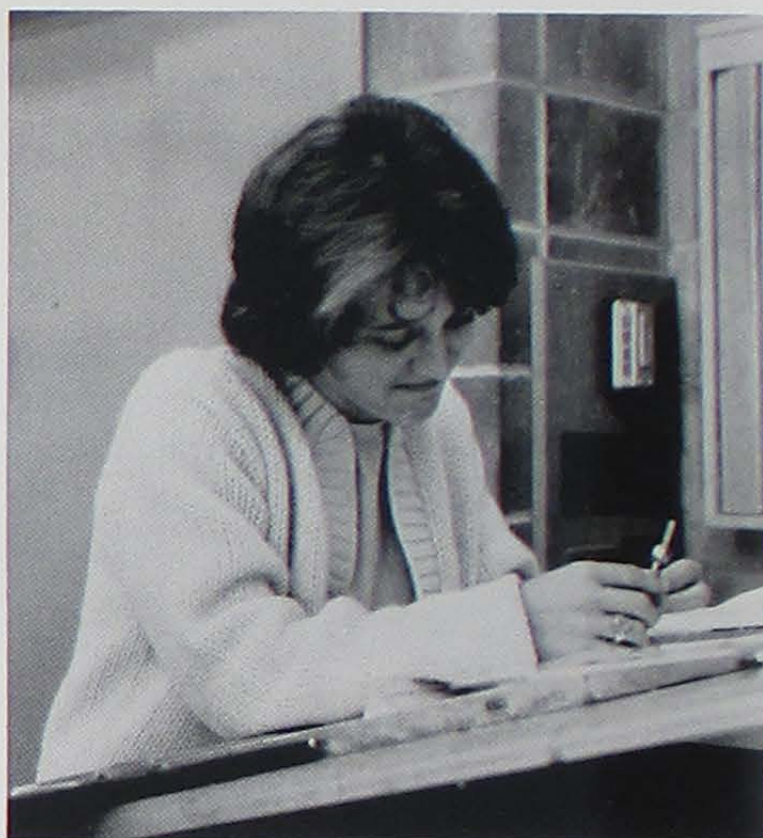

For the first time in recorded history, there is no longer a great demand for unskilled labor. Technical skill has become practically a necessity for employment. Keeping this in mind, Ames High has a wide variety of programs in industrial art and commercial courses.

Drafting, woodworking, metal working, and auto mechanics were offered in the beautiful new shop in the industrial education wing of AHS. Commercial courses in preparation for secretarial work included typing, stenography, shorthand, and bookkeeping. The Commercial Department took up residence this year in the new third addition.

An appraising glance into a crystal ball reveals that most Ames High girls will spend a healthy portion of their lives in their own homes governing the lives of their children. Ames High offers courses in home economics to prepare girls for this destiny.

Another look into the crystal ball shows a variety of jobs in technological areas being filled by competent workers who received their basic training at AHS. Thus another goal of high school is fulfilled—to give each student instruction which will help him follow the career of his choice.

"We are not softies"

Across the country rang the cry: "Americans are a bunch of softies!" President Kennedy hired Bud Wilkinson to lead a rebirth of physical fitness. Fifty mile hikes became the style, and the Canadian Royal Air Force practically financed a year's operation by selling exercise plans. The country resounded with the "one-two, one-two" of the calisthenics leader.

Amidst the fury, there lay a small midwestern town with no high school gym. But Mr. Wells, Mr. Smalling, and Miss Zanders proceeded undaunted. Touch football, bowling, cross country, isometrics, ping-pong, handball, and wrestling were all provided for by masterful improvisation. “Have not the wisest of men in all ages, not excepting Solomon himself,—have they not had their Hobby-Horses;—their running horses,—their coins and their cockle shells,—their drums and their trumpets, their fiddles, their pallets, their maggots and their butterflies?—and so long as a man rides his Hobby-Horse peaceably and quietly along the King’s highway, and neither compels you or me to get up behind him,—pray, Sir, what have either you or I to do with it?”—Tristram Shandy

The trunks of the stately elms bear close resemblance to each other; it is in the branches where they differ. Let the heart-wood be strong and tough for all; the branches will display beauty and character. The tiny growing tip on the furthestmost branch comes closest to the goal toward which the whole tree strives. The fragile paper leaves replenish the lifeblood of the sturdy trunks, and in the glorious fall they reach their zenith and eclipse all but themselves. A strong foundation protects from wind, storm, and drought, but what tree was ever loved or remembered for only roots?

“As a Girl Reserve I will be . . .”

The busy girls going from door to door sometime before Christmas were Ames High Girl Reserves who were trying to earn the money needed to sponsor the many service projects carried out by this group. While these same girls might have been the ones who were slow to pay their quarter dues, they gladly pestered their neighbors into supporting this worthwhile organization.

Ames High Girl Reserves were involved in a variety of service efforts. One was the support of a foster child. At Christmas time each home-room sent her a Christmas card, letting her know that they were all thinking of her. During the same season, gifts were taken to the residents of the Story County Home. Friendship Week and the Teens Against Polio drive were jointly sponsored by the Girl Reserves and Boys' Club.

PRESIDENTS JEFF COX AND MIKE SCHWARTZ spent many hours of behind-the-scene planning with Mr. Stone.

A COMPREHENSIVE roster of Boys' Club assemblies included a program by Police Chief Olson.

Boys' Club offers guidance

As the name implies, the Ames High Boys' Club places only one restriction on membership. Boys' Club has two major fields of activity: projects of interest to the boys themselves, and projects of service to the community.

Due to its large size, the Boys' Club is administered by a body of officers and representatives that rival that of any organization in school in numbers. Each homeroom has a representative, and the cabinet consists of eight officers. Faculty advisors were Mr. Albertson, Mr. Oltrogge, and Mr. Stone.

In the field of student interest, the club organized the hobby groups. Twice during the year, the boys divided up into sections which met for a program concerning a hobby of mutual interest.

Service projects included the organization of Friendship Week and Teens Against Polio and the support of a foreign orphan.

DRAMA'S LONG AND FASCINATING history is retold.

"All the world's a stage"

Entombed in each person is a reservoir of creative ideas and expressive feelings which gives him the assets needed in the mythical, magical world of theater. The students of Ames High who are archeological enough to explore this tomb and tap its resources are often led to the Drama Department. However, the brilliance of this inviting field seems somewhat dulled and tarnished when a list of requirements for the beginning drama course is handed out. Technical theater must be learned first, and detailed scene design projects, elaborate costume drawings, and gooey make-up applications take up the time spent in class. The students who can hurdle these obstacles often take on the challenges of Advanced Drama. Character interpretations, directing exercises, and play writing are accomplished to the appropriate tune of grumbling and excuses. But creative expression is given free rein and a wide open field so that the hopeful actor and actress can discover their strengths and weaknesses.

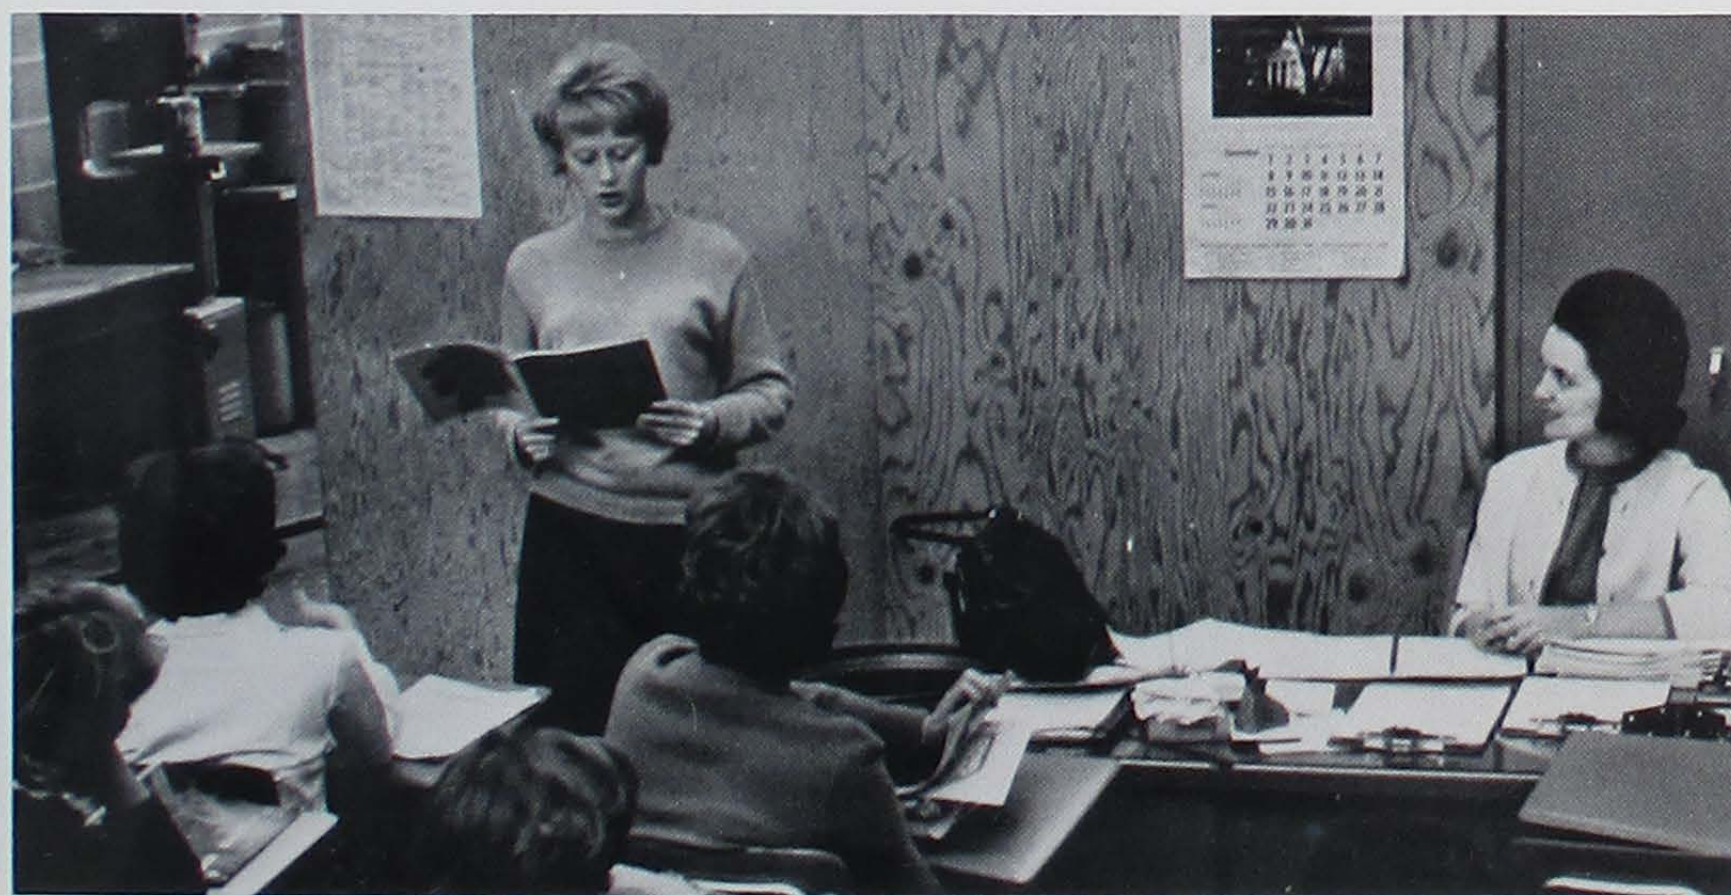

DRAMATICS IS not all lights and glory as these flat scrubbing students discover.

PAINTS, pictures, scenes, and sets, and so the play progresses.

The curtain rises on MRS. McTHING

The alternating flashes of lightness and darkness and the eerie squeaking of the dimming house lights notified all crews and actors that the Drama Department's fall production of Mrs. McThing was ready to begin. Frantic whispers of, "Break a leg!" subsided as the curtain swished open and the audience's applause was heard. This sound soon changed to laughter as the excellent comedy by Mary Chase kept the audience in stitches for two hours.

The scene opened in the elegant home of Mrs. Howard V. Larue III. Mrs. Larue discovered that a witch, Mrs. McThing, had put an animated stick in the place of Howay, Mrs. Larue's only child. Mrs. Larue went searching for Howay and wound up in the Shantyland Pool Hall Lunchroom. Here she found her son, who had joined a mob of small-time hoodlums. Another bout with Mrs. McThing resulted in a stick taking the place of Mrs. Larue. With a little witchcraft by Mimi, Mrs. McThing's daughter, the Larues returned to their home and Mimi became a part of their family after a tender parting with Mrs. McThing.

1280 Applaud THE MADWOMAN OF CHAILLOT

The backstage area of Central auditorium was a beehive of activity around 6:00 P.M. on the 13th and 15th of February, production dates for the junior class play. The make-up room hummed with excitement as powder flew madly from whisking brushes, as grease paint covered everything in sight, and as glue stuck on beards. The latest Beatles' record was blaring from the tape recorder. A costume's crew member moaned as another pin was stuck in a dilapidated outfit. But in two hours' time all was quiet and orderly as the curtain swept open, revealing the cafe of Chez Francis. From this setting and the basement of No. 21 Rue de Chaillot traipsed an assortment of characters that ran the gamut of Jean Giraudoux's imagination. After learning of a plot cooked up by a group of big businessmen to destroy Paris by drilling for oil, the Madwoman of Chaillot succeeded in setting the world in order again with the help of a conglomeration of vagabonds and three other madwomen.

Choir fills the air with song

In a dark and misty corner of the basement, sheltered from all outside interruptions except an occasional trumpet player, seventy-five members of the a cappella choir met to practice. They sang everything from spirituals to the "Hallelujah Chorus."

The group was at its best in performance. Whether it was the lack of music, the robes, or the audience that did the trick, no one knows. But suddenly the whole choir experienced a sort of unity and joy that made inhibitions fly with the wind. Enthusiasm radiated almost visibly, and every accent and crescendo came without effort. A tiny smile spread across Mr. Cross's face, and as the last echo faded and the curtain closed, he whispered "good." And for that instant, as the world rushed into the vacuum of happiness and satisfaction, nothing existed but beauty, excitement, and wonder.

SMALL GROUPS help bring out individual talent; the four individual talents in the Senior Boys' Quartet are Larry McCoy, Allan Simpson, Charles Sivesind, Richard Black.

THE HIGHEST GOAL in vocal music is membership in Choir, which performed such numbers as Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" in the Christmas Program.

Rising musicians win All-State positions

Years of practice make a serious high school musician so much superior to his fellows in band, choir, and orchestra that even the most patient and dedicated artist would soon find a lack of challenge. The opportunity to audition for the All-State Music Festival helps a great deal in overcoming this difficulty. Instrumental students prepare solos, scales, and sight reading skills to try out for All State Band or Orchestra. Vocal music students work in quartets to audition for the All-State Choir. Over the Thanksgiving weekend, the selected musicians met from all over the state to prepare a concert. Marilyn Quam was awarded the particular honor of being one of two to accompany the All-State Chorus. The annual festival was enjoyable, stimulating, and well worth the work necessary to become a part of it.

BEING SELECTED All-State accompanist was a great honor for Marilyn Quam.

THE AMES HIGH CONCERT BAND provided many concerts throughout the year, including those for ISEA, for the student body, and for the general public.

57 MEMBERS of Sophomore Band presented a joint concert with the Orchestra on February 20.

Musicians band together

Hey! The Left Foot! Turn! Now! For Heaven's Sake!

The first day of marching is a harrowing experience for everyone. The drums are confused; a sophomore forgot to turn; the seniors are dragging their feet. It appears as though the first halftime will be the most humiliating experience in history. But with the addition of colorful uniforms and a large audience, a miraculous change invariably takes place; feet lift high and maneuvers come off with precision. And as the weeks go by things improve. But just as the members begin to learn which foot is left, the band is literally frozen off the field. Auditions are held, and with a boom from the tympani and a squeak from a clarinet, the concert band is off and running for a season of classical and popular music performances. Come spring and they are back on foot again, practicing for the Viesha parade. And despite a good number of people with two left feet and an extra one to trip over, the band has accumulated a reputation for being tops in every form in which they appear.

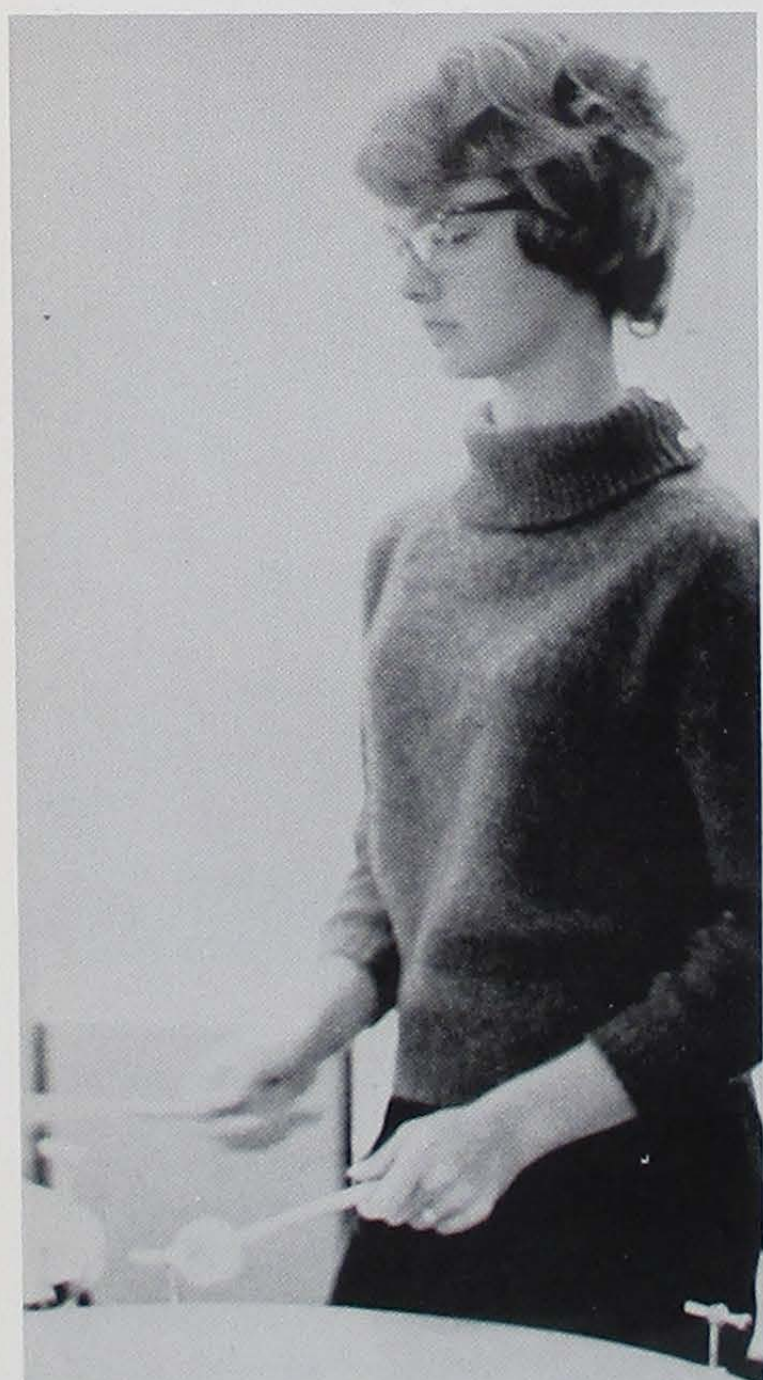

MR. DAY LENDS a welcome helping hand.

THE FLUTISTS TAKE TIME OUT of a busy practice to eye a difficult part.

ENTHUSIASTIC INDIVIDUAL PLAYERS insure a vivid performance.

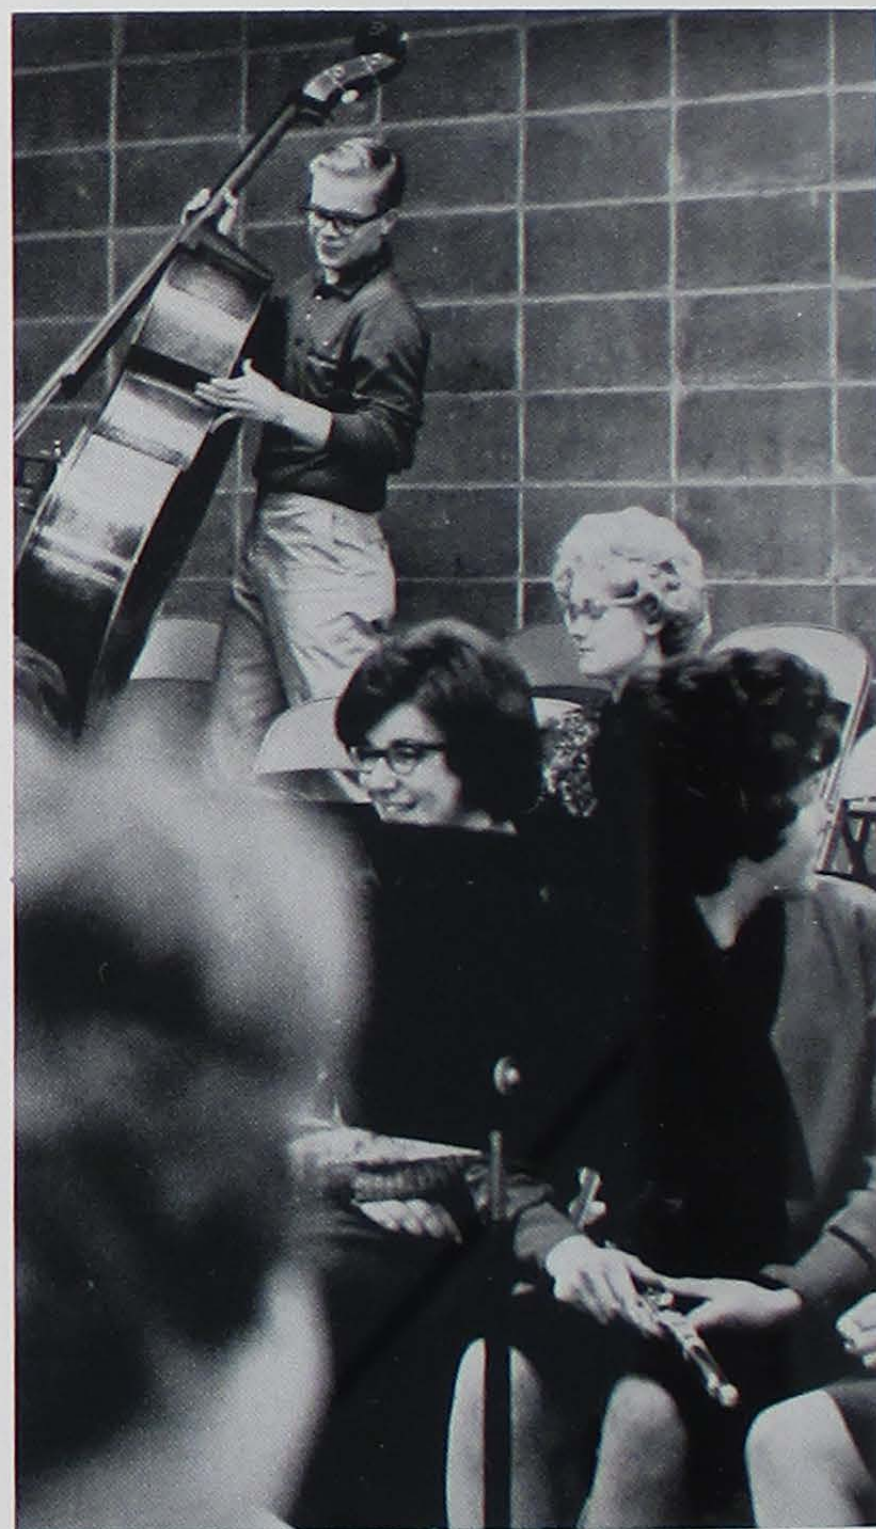

Orchestra offered opportunities for expression

The most complex and grand instrument of artistic expression is the symphony orchestra. Most of the greatest classical music has been written for orchestra or a solo instrument with orchestra. Traditionally this is where the most serious and dedicated musicians may be found.

The Ames High School Orchestra lacks the diversity and depth of players necessary for a full symphony orchestra, but its small size has the advantage of giving many more solo opportunities to the individual player. Section leaders from the band join with string players taught by Mr. Moberg and practice under his direction. They perform as a pit orchestra for the plays, for a student body assembly, and at a spring concert in conjunction with the other student orchestras in Ames.

MUSIC FROM THE PIT provided intermission music at plays.

M WOODS PROVIDES the basis for the orchestra.

PLAYING SECOND FIDDLE is more fun in the AHS orchestra.

PRACTICE SESSIONS helped orchestra members put the professional touch on their numbers.

MR. MOBERG spent hours of pre-performance preparation with the orchestra.

Language clubs enrich insight

For the language students who felt that the package of knowledge offered in class needed some wrapping paper and ribbon to brighten it up and give it a more finished appearance, the language clubs were organized.

The main function of the Latin Club was to throw the springtime revelry, the Roman banquet. Students came attired in togas that defied description, none of which, however, could compare with Mr. Ripp's gold and purple creation. A multi-course meal featuring a roast pig was served by genuine slaves.

Spanish Club offered a variety of programs for its members. At one meeting, Jay Wallin presented a vivid account of his visit to Spain. A movie on Mexico gave the students a chance to learn more about our neighbor south of the border. A Christmas pot-luck proved a rousing success. A Mexican ballet presented at Iowa State enthralled all the members of Spanish Club.

AND GERMAN FOOD brought a touch of the "Old Country" to German Club.

French, German customs characterize clubs

French students were kept busy with meetings which ranged from can-can dancing to slides of Mrs. Vandecar's visit to France. In the fall, a French Fête, or celebration, was given at Ames High with French students from neighboring towns attending. The students tried to converse intelligibly in French, gave up, and enjoyed the refreshments.

German Club also had an interesting array of programs. Pot-lucks seemed the best way of getting students together, since most AHS students have a passion for food. Dr. Schwartz, professor of German at Iowa State, spoke to the group on one occasion, while at other times home-grown talent of singing and dancing to German tunes was presented.

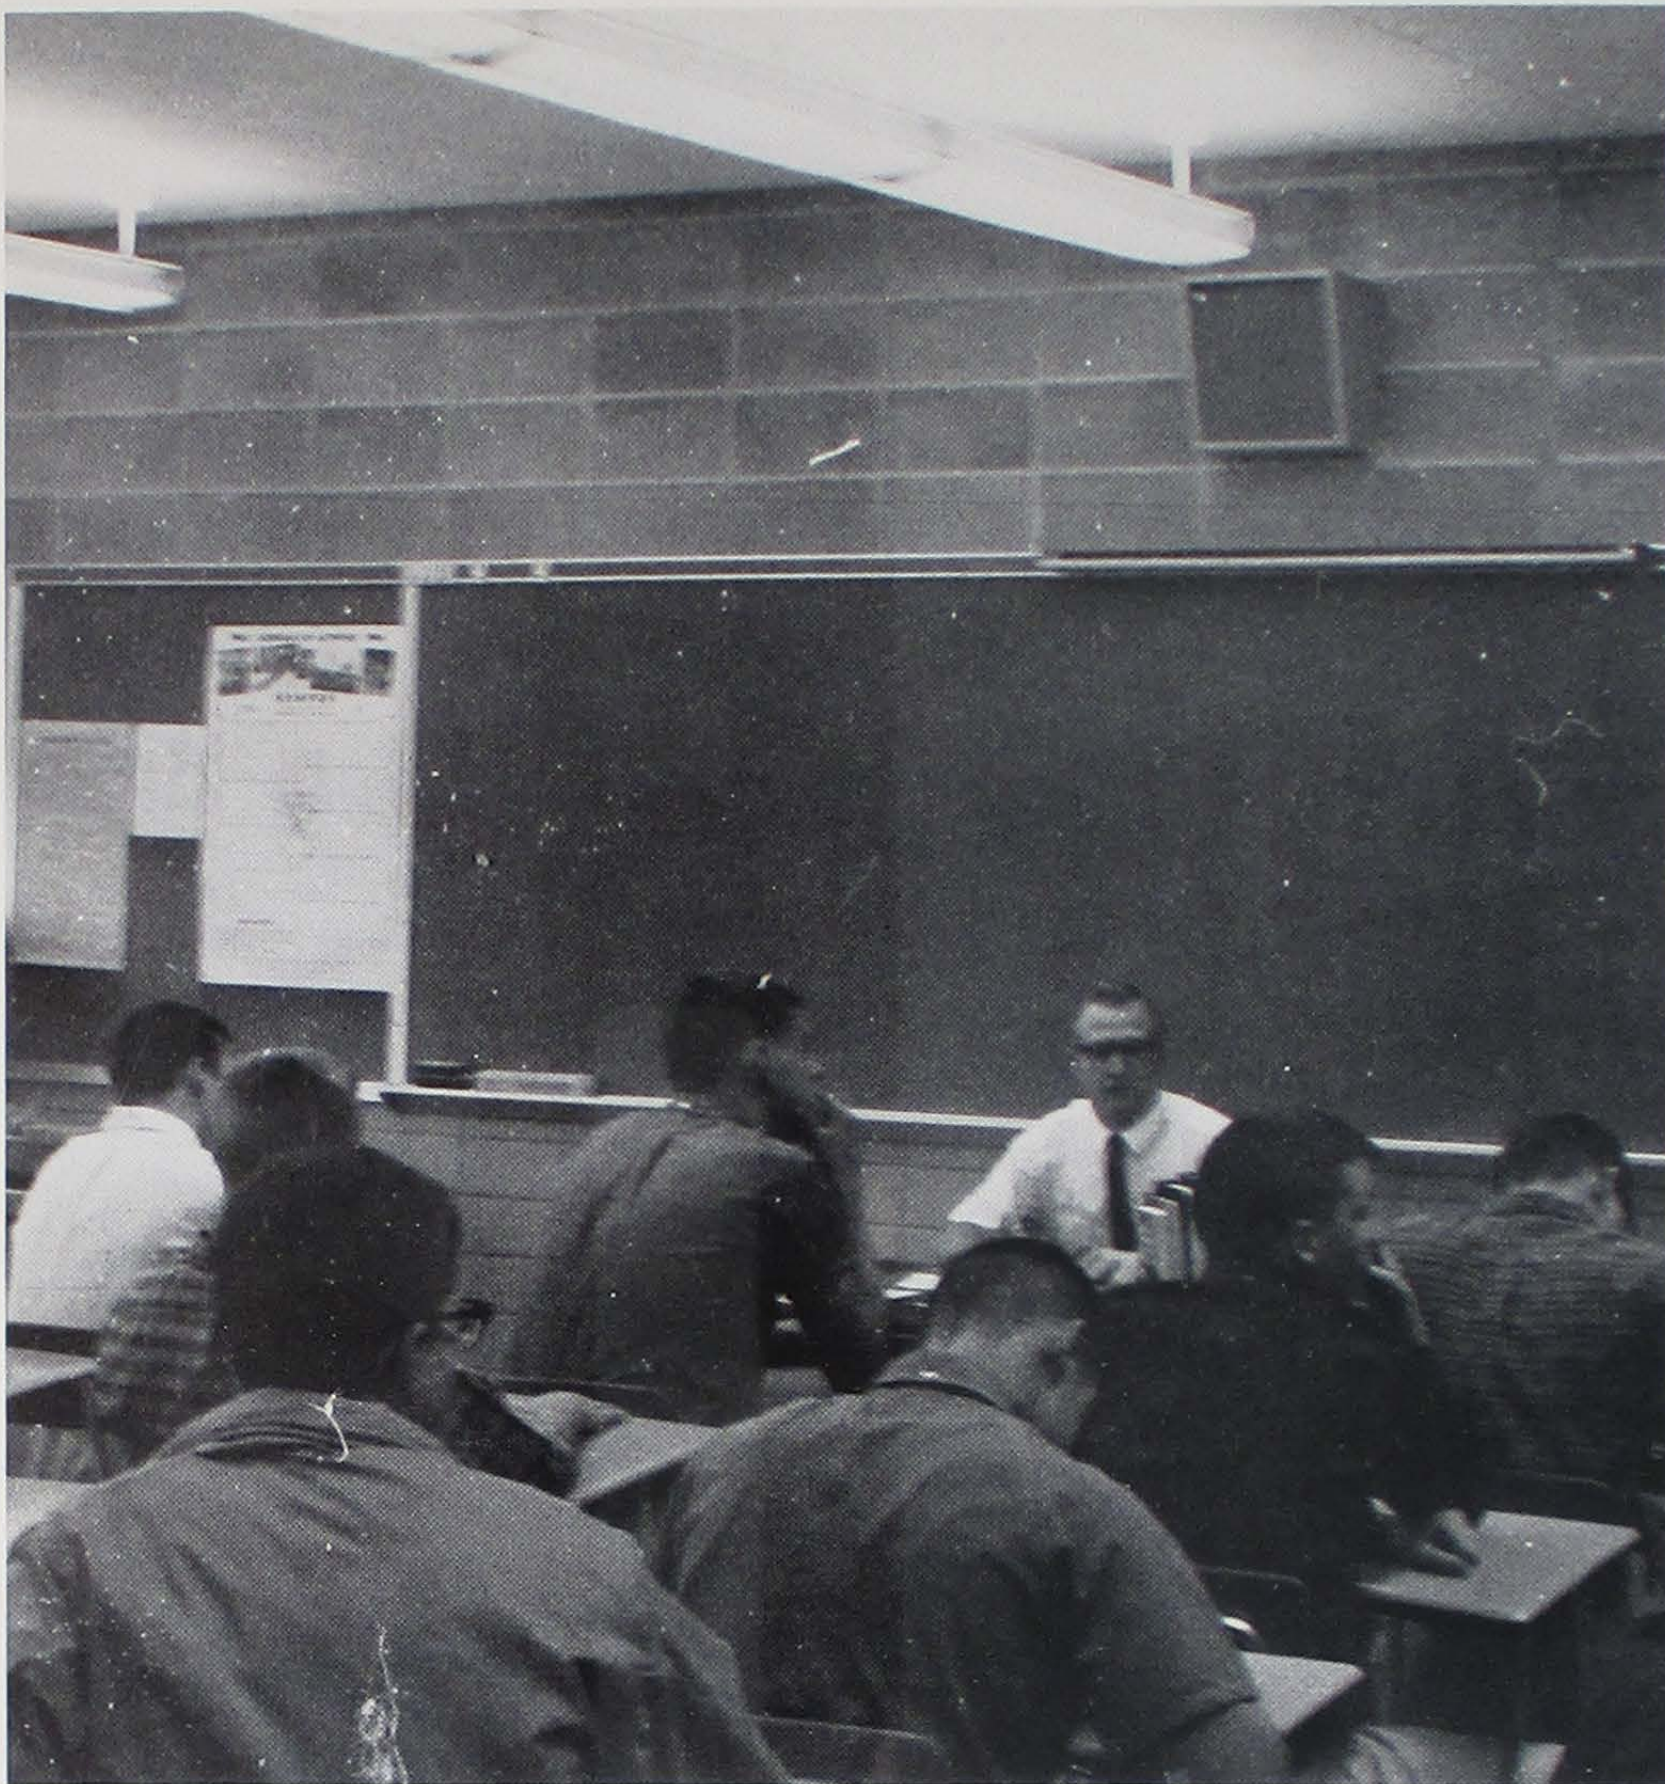

AN OPPORTUNITY to view a French dance doesn't come often, however French Club students had this chance at the Fete.

TELLING A GOOD STORY is hard in itself. Telling one in French requires even more ability.

MUCH TIME WAS SPENT in preparing for the French Fete, a party to which French students from other towns were invited.

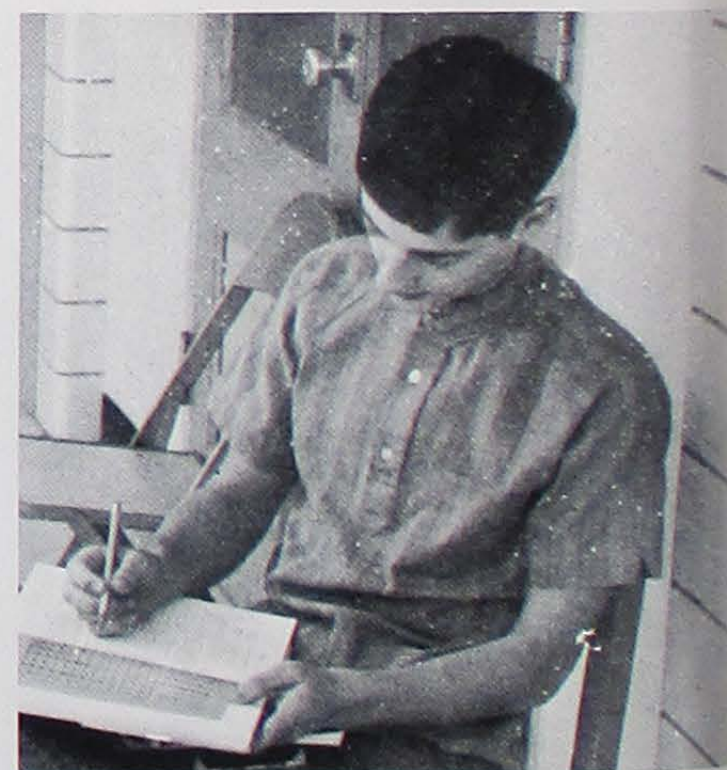

ALERT FIRE SQUAD MEMBERS listen intently to Mr. Ripp's words of wisdom.

PRESIDENTS Bill Nordskog and Bill Soult bring their latest problems to sponsor Mr. Ripp.

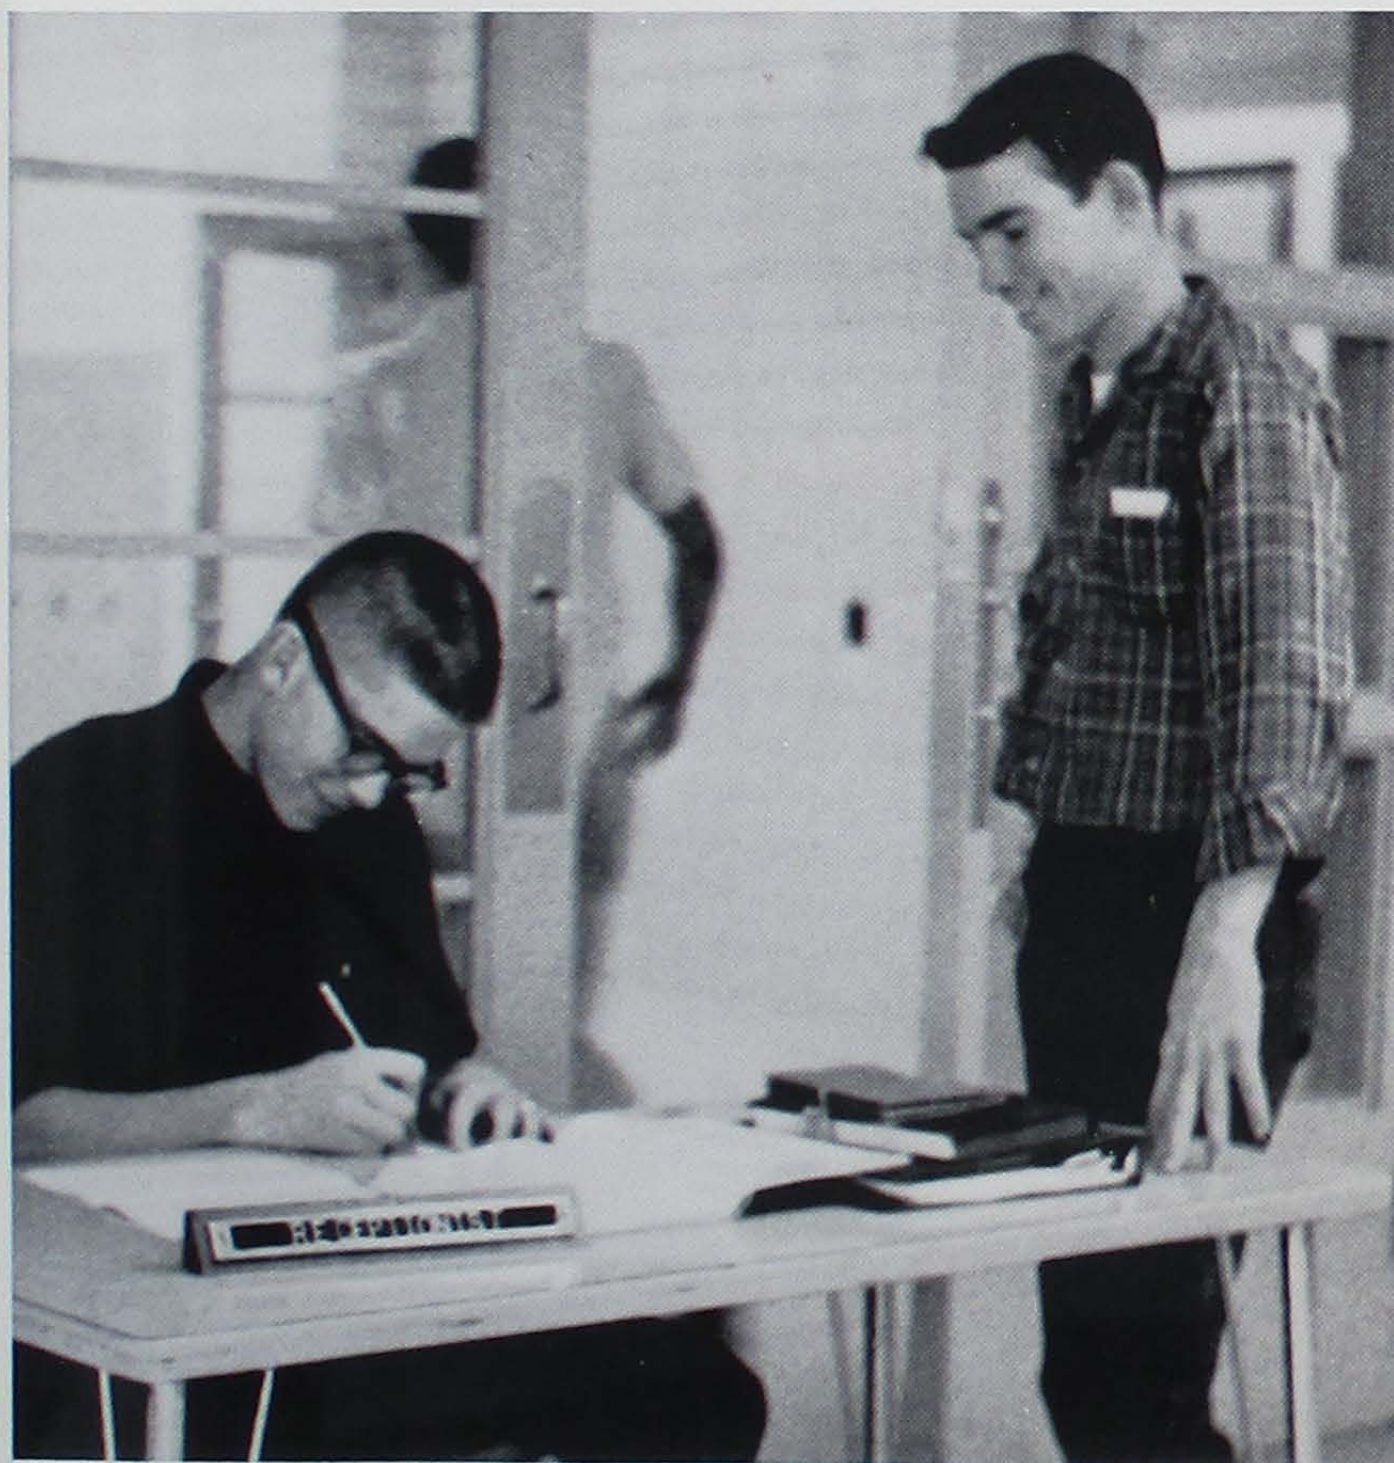

EVEN THE MOST CONSCIENTIOUS Fire Squad members have to study some-time.

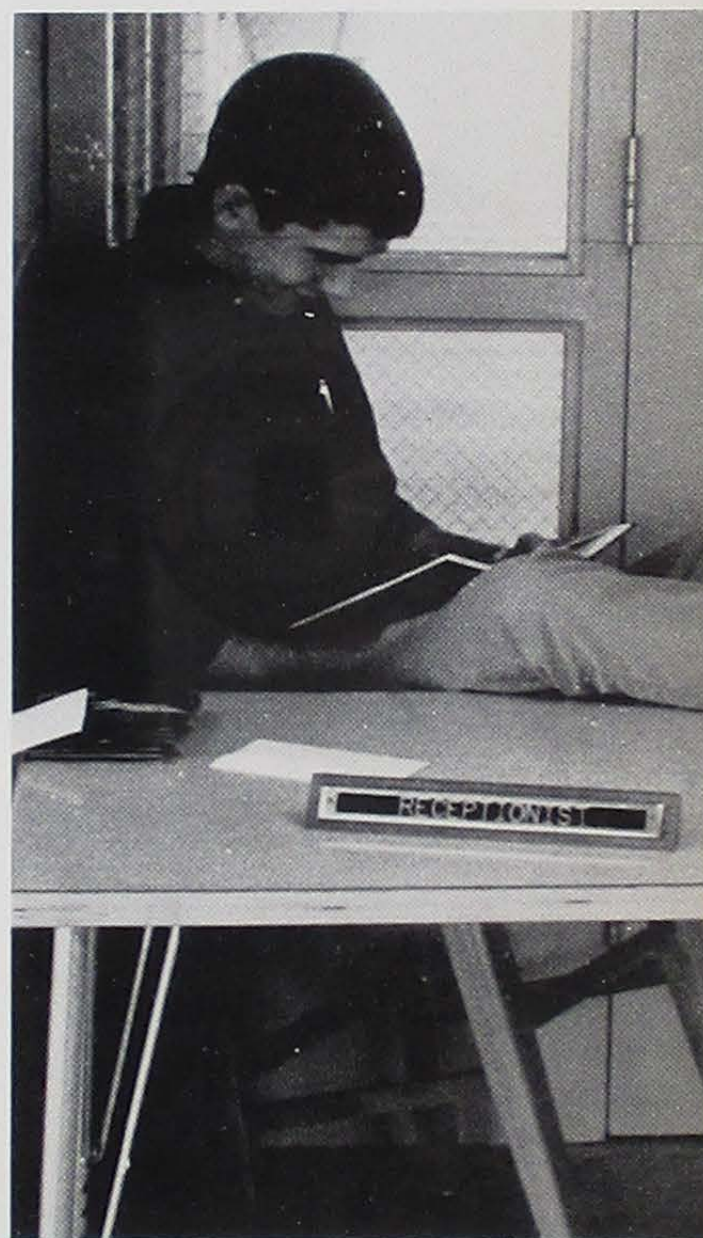

Fire squad and monitors assume noon duties

Whenever possible, the administration gives up its power of enforcement to student groups. Whether the smile that accompanies this transfer of authority is one of cheerful generosity or exuberant relief is a question that remains unanswered, but the students appreciate the right to govern themselves, and student-teacher relations are much improved when the teacher is able to throw off the role of disciplinarian that often covers up his larger role, that of the scholar.

The two principal student enforcement agencies at Ames High are the Fire Squad and an innovation known as the hall monitors. The Fire Squad has several duties, including supervision of fire drills and control of conduct in the halls and classrooms. The hall monitors serve the dual function of checking student passes and assisting guests of the school. Both organizations have the respect of student and teacher alike and have been very effective in performance of their duties.

A CHEERFUL receptionist was on duty at all times.

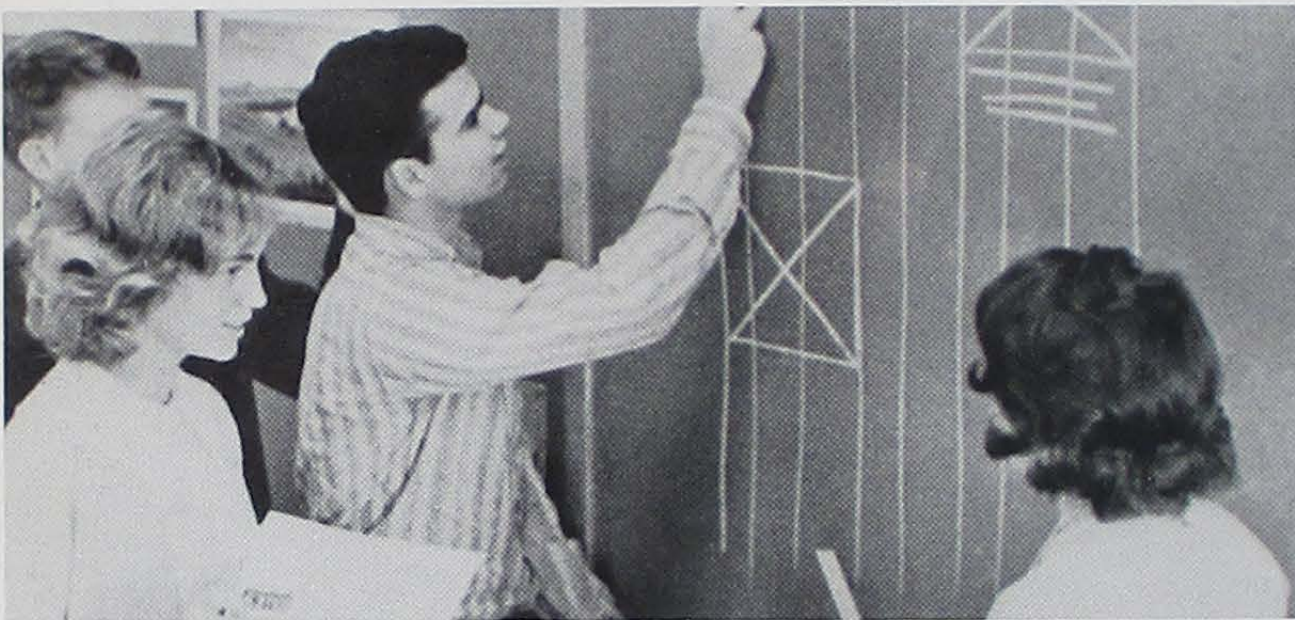

DESPITE THE LOOKS of things, being a hall monitor is a hard job.

Journalistic experience gained

The free press is a major factor in obtaining and preserving democracy. An ignorant populace is incapable of governing itself, lacking the necessary unity of thought and action to create and manage a government. An opportunity for students to gain actual practice in this field is the course in Journalism offered to Seniors. The result of their efforts is a weekly newspaper, the Web, which is printed in the Ames Daily Tribune. The Web contains news and feature articles, and a regular humor column. A weekly editorial is also traditional. Self-criticism is the best sign of a healthy government, and the right to complain is a cherished part of America's national heritage. Thus the Web performs the double function of publishing news and editorials for AHS and also giving participants invaluable career training.

IN THEIR OWN grubby way, SPIRIT Staff members leave a "Merry Christmas" wish for Mrs. Lutz's classes.

“... Wasn't it a mighty day!”

AT DEADLINE TIME the whole staff does nothing but work.

“Wasn't it a mighty day!” said the green blackboard. The typewriters rushed madly into the closet, the pictures wilted in the darkroom drier, and sheets of paper flitted from desk to desk. The only living thing in the room was Mrs. Lutz, and she was just barely alive. For the SPIRIT Staff had come and gone, accomplishing whatever they did in a very loud manner. The last people to scoot the desks back into place and scramble for the door after the bell rang were met head on by those coming back for things they had forgotten. The confusion seemed complete. But everyone was just building up speed to slam into the brick wall called—the deadline.

... AND SOMETIMES all the SPIRIT Staff members are in the room at the same time.

Library club mends books; Debate moves to new success

A political campaign needs many willing hands to keep it running smoothly. The Library Club at Ames High performed a similar service. Though the work and sacrifice of both organizations are often underestimated, their help can not be valued. The members of Library Club, under Mrs. Dickinson's leadership, were responsible for the smooth functioning of the library's inner workings. Their efficient work kept the library an attractive place for study. The participants took turns helping in the library by checking out books, collecting fines, sending out over-due slips, and keeping the shelves neat and orderly. But they found that all work and no play was not the ideal situation; so meetings were held so the members could do some socializing.

Debate is intellectual football. It is wadding up two spider webs, and then trying to separate them again. It is trying to decide whether Mr. Cole likes what is being said, which is trying to decide what the Mona Lisa is thinking. It is a big pile of cards that are always in the wrong order, and a ten minute speech that runs down after two minutes. It is a debater motioning wildly from the back of the room to stop his partner from ruining what little thread of a case he may have had. And last, debate is the look of confident superiority that hides the surprise of the winner.

Seminar offers first-hand science experience

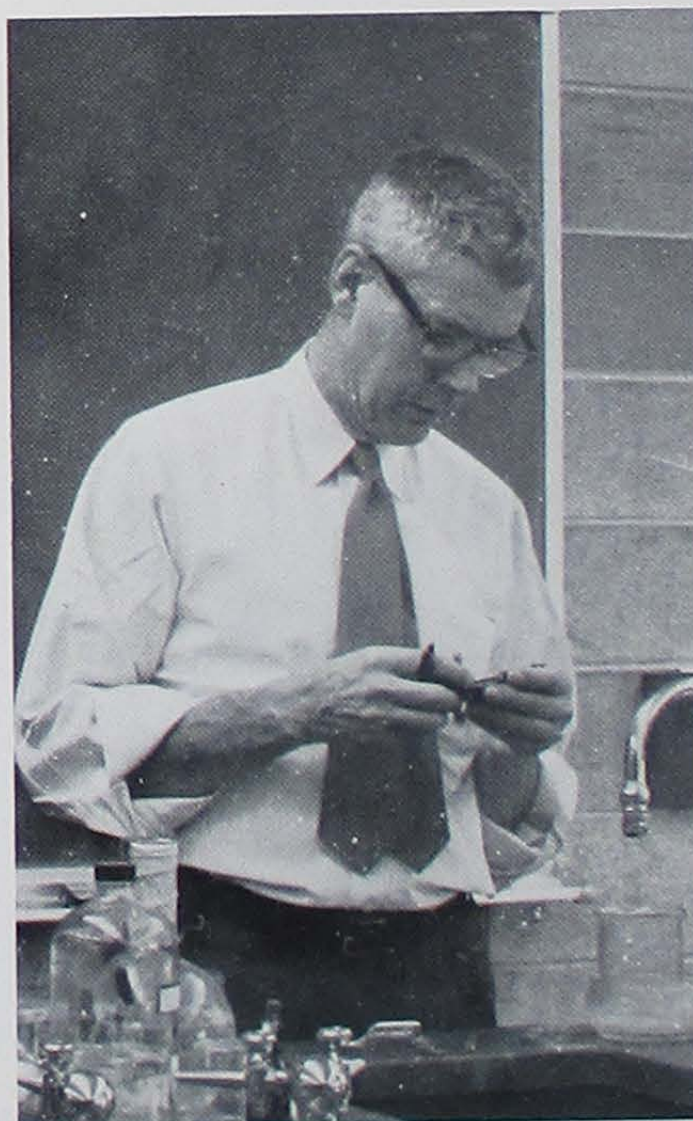

While everyone else is home watching TV or doing anything else but studying, a group of devoted young scientists drag themselves back into the dimly lit halls and laboratories to pursue their interest in the many fields of research including alchemy, fortune telling, and witch doctoring. Anyone who makes gold from lead or completes an equally significant project is entitled to the $\frac{1}{4}$ credit that Science Seminar offers. Members of Science Seminar attend lectures, conduct related experiments, and engage in individual research under the leadership and supervision of Mr. Trump. Each year several of the projects are entered in the Hawkeye Science Fair.

The excellent selection of cauldrons and potion ingredients recently installed at the new school is made available to everyone. Often one of the students experimenting with magic manages to conjure up a professor from ISU, who brings many secret recipes and spells.

SCIENCE SEMINAR helped students to learn through lectures, study and experimentation.

Co-op links merchants, students; FHA produces homemakers

The Future Homemakers of America was composed of girls who were taking home-ec or were interested in this field. Their main goal was to help the community through help in the home. Their meetings offered varied programs that were of interest to all the girls. Exchanges with other clubs in the surrounding towns were a common practice. Interested members from Ames attended a district meeting at Pella to elect officers and share ideas. Mary Sielert served as president for the Ames chapter this year.

The Ames High branch of vocational education had its own organization in the Co-op Club. As winter approached, the members earned money by selling antifreeze and windshield scrapers to the Ames High motorists. A project for one of the members was to design a shield that would represent the Ames club. Larry Hedberg was president of the group under the sponsorship of Mr. Shadle.

Athletics

"In me younger days 'twas not considered ray-spictable f'r to be an athlete. An athlete was always a man that was not sthrong enough f'r wurruk. Frantions dhruw him fr'm school an' th' vagrancy laws dhruw him to baseball." . . . Dunne

A hundred years ago the common conception of an athlete was summed up by a writer of the time in the passage above. In the short space of time between then and now the athlete has risen in public esteem until he shares the top of the pedestal with the scholar, and due to his superior size, often manages to push the scholar off. The tempo of everyday life in AHS rises and falls with the successes and failures of its athletes. Sports are among the favorite avocations of nearly everyone. The interest is so widespread that the variety of sports increases every year, with wrestling being the latest addition to the interscholastic program.

It joined baseball, football, basketball, track, golf and tennis in providing a year full of excitement that never had a moment to die down.

Cheerleaders radiate pep at rallies, games

At each football and basketball game, the bundle of arms, legs, and energy that jumped around madly and screamed wildly was the representative of Ames High femininity, a cheerleader. Thirteen girls were chosen in class tryouts last year to make up this elite group. Then at a special assembly, the regulars were selected. At sophomore orientation the sophomores elected their own cheerleaders. Working just as hard as the athletes, these girls were responsible for promoting the great school spirit exhibited at all games.

Track runs year 'round

To keep in step with modern track programs of other high schools in the state, Ames High instituted a fall track program this year. Coach Hi Covey had long seen the need for such a program to gain added conditioning for the winter and spring programs. Considering that this was the first year for the program, it was a tremendous success. The cross country team ran in five meets. These included the CIC mile meet—second place—, the State mile meet—fourth place—, the Mike Augustine Invitational cross country meet—second place—, the CIC cross country—first place—the State Cross Country—fifth place.

PEP CLUB GIRLS combined energy and talent to brighten the hallways with posters.

BEHIND every successful organization there's a group of efficient officers. Pictured here are M Richards, C Sorenson, M Boehnke, C Ustrud.

"Peanuts" posters, cheering characterize Pep Club

The gaudy posters taped in the walls every Friday showed that those girls in the orange jackets and black socks had been at it again. The Pep Club could be seen cheering wildly at all games, whether at home or out of town.

They kept busy by thinking up original skits that the teachers wouldn't object to for the pep assemblies. Their posters reminded everyone of the games each weekend and offered a few laughs and groans for the students. The themes for these exotic creations ranged from Peanuts to poetry to puns.

The whole group kept up Ames High's reputation of tremendous school spirit.

Homecoming victory celebrated wildly

1963 was a brand new year for Ames High football fans. The season brought about many changes including a new head coach, a new assistant coach, and a completely different offense. Our head coach, Cecil Spatcher, was ably assisted by Wally Linn and Tom Beckham, who was won over from conference rival Grinnell.

From a won-lost standpoint, Ames High's 3-5-1 record does not show the effort that the members of the squad put forth; nor does it show the adverse conditions which continually haunted their efforts. A synopsis of the season would show many losses in key personnel. There were many fine defensive efforts but an inability to mount a sustained offensive attack often hurt the Little Cyclones.

Ames finished fourth in the CIC behind Boone, Newton, and Marshalltown and ahead of Osky and Grinnell. Little Cyclones receiving all conference honors were Bob Best, first team end; Jim Hansen, second team halfback; Phil Carr, second team tackle; Pic Wilson, third team center; Dave Scandrett, third team fullback.

Highlights of the season were the 13-0 homecoming victory over Osky, the first homecoming win in four years, and the 12-7 victory over East Sioux City, revenge for last year's 34-7 drubbing. Bitterest defeat was Boone's 21-0 win, thus claiming the victory bell the second year in a row.

Junior varsity football is considered an important part of the varsity season by the coaches. These games gave the coaches a chance to get a closer look at juniors and some seniors who were not regulars on the varsity. This season the J.V.'s played North and Lincoln D.M., Marshalltown, and the Adel varsity.

Sophomore coach Maurice Hausheer was quite pleased by this year's sophomore squad. Lacking any outstanding athletes but not fine team effort, the sophs compiled a 6-1-2 season record.

IT IS not until one endures the toil and strain of a match that one appreciates and respects the word Wrestler.

Wrestling in 2nd year

A strange new breed of men has emerged at Ames High. Perhaps you have seen them at various stages of change. They are those boys who sit in the cafeteria at noon and suck ice cubes for nourishment and drool over other people's meals as they have none for themselves. These are the wrestlers. Organized wrestling is in its second year at AHS. Forty boys attended planned bedlam sessions in the basement after school in preparation for their varsity meets. These boys felt that wrestling was the most all around competitive sport offered. It allowed individual competition and required extensive conditioning.

THEY CAN VOUCH that the mat comes up fast and hard.

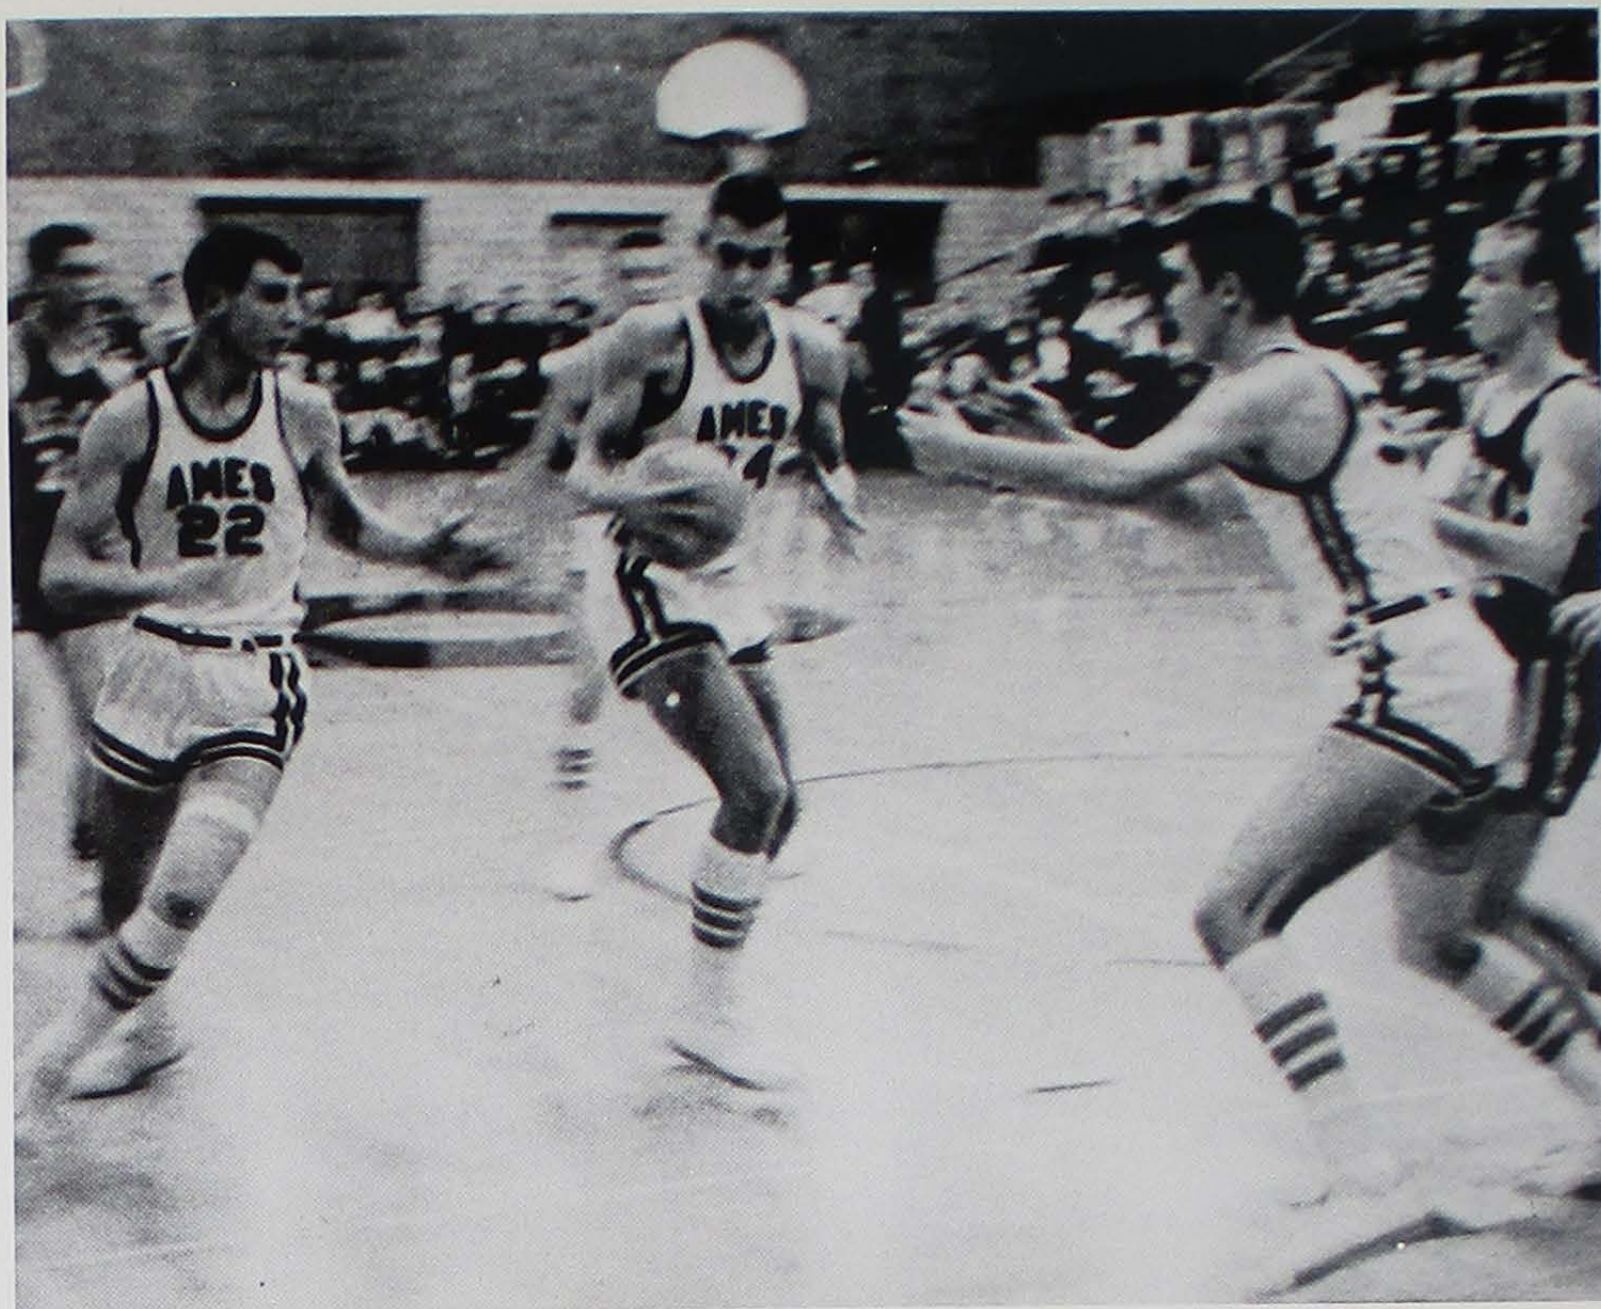

WITH A LIMITED AMOUNT of space on the mat, the fellows took turns wrestling, resting, and watching pointers given by Mr. Oltrogge.

Ames second in C.I.C.

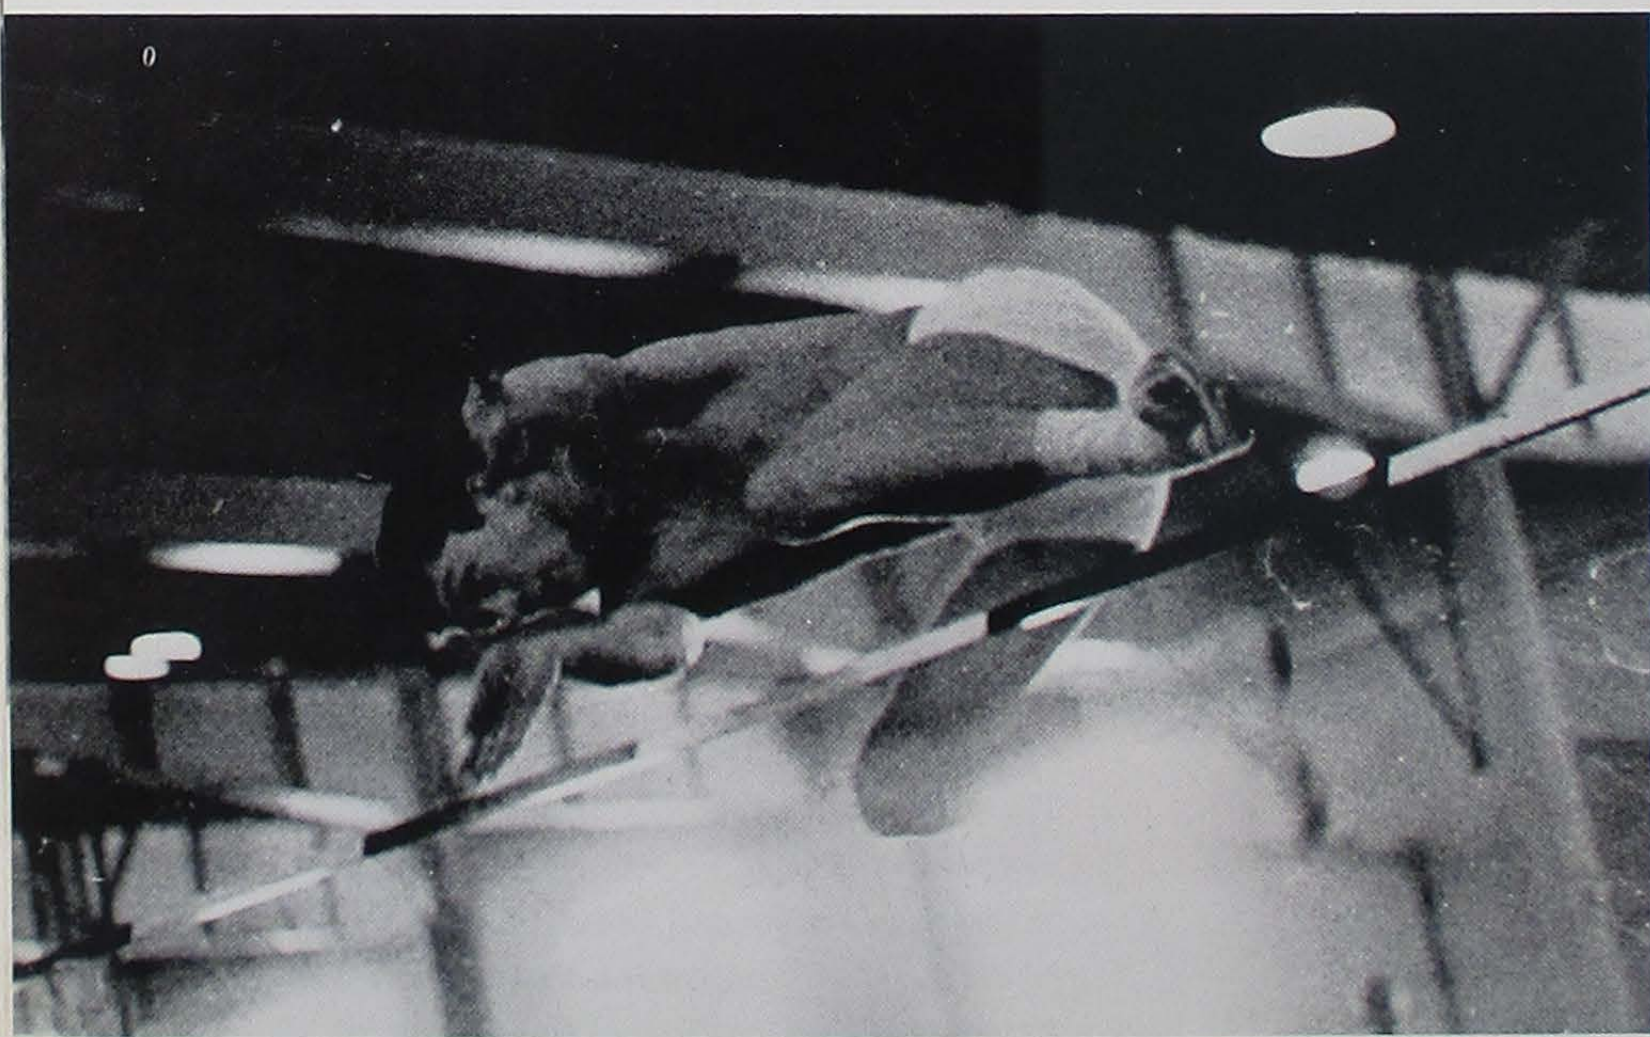

As in football, the basketball season began with basic practice in fundamentals on a new offense which was better fitted to the personnel of the squad. The team lived up to its expectations in compiling an 11-6 record in regular season's play. Once again, the C.I.C. came up with some of the state's toughest competition, with Ames in second place with a 7-3 record behind Newton and Marshalltown who tied for first with 8-2 marks. At the end of the conference season, these three C.I.C. teams were among the top sixteen in the state.

The effort displayed by the basketball team was welcome relief from last year's season as Ames was able to reverse the results of 11 games. The first game, a 54-52 defeat of pre-season favorite Mason City, showed what was to come during the season; the game was undecided until the last minute. Coach Wally Linn felt the ability of the Little Cyclones to win close games served them well as 10 games were decided by three or less points. Ames played two double overtime games, beating Boone and Marshalltown by identical 51-50 scores. The defeat of the Bobcats was the first victory on the Marshalltown court since 1954 by Ames.

The Ames Sophs surprised everyone but themselves in amassing a 10-0 record in the conference. Added to this were 3 wins and 4 losses for a 13-4 overall mark. The all important State Tournament games were a challenge as usual as the district in which Ames competed was very competitive.

State Indoor tests Ames track squad

TWO HOLD overs from last year's champion two mile team, Mike Yeaman and Jim Ingvaldstad practice baton exchanges.

Indoor track is one sport which does not cause a lot of commotion in the high school but which deserves all the attention it can get. Each year a group of dedicated boys begins practice during Christmas vacation and continues work until the outdoor season begins in April. During this time, one can see many orange and grey clad trackmen ranging far afield, wandering down lonely country roads and over the golf courses. Practice and conditioning continue at a set pace and build to a climax at the end of March when the State Indoor Track Meet is held in Iowa City. Then all the hard work and preparation goes on the line and another assault on the record books begins.

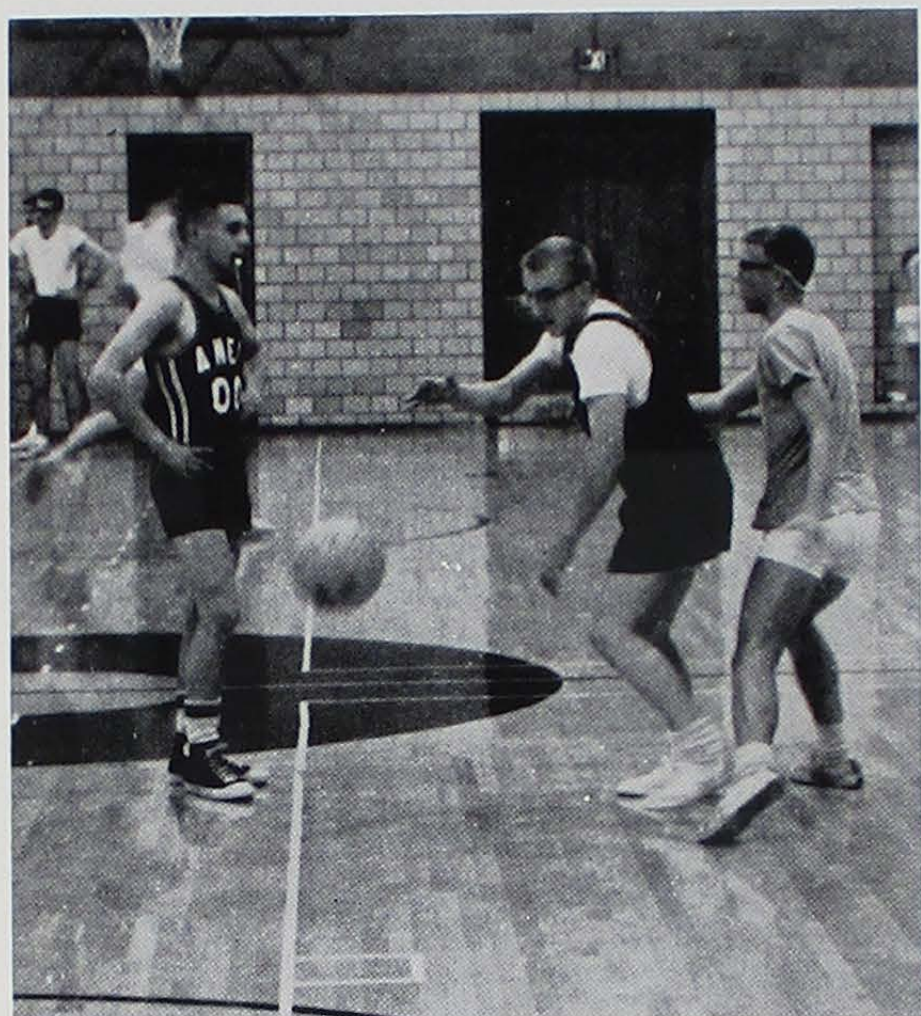

Ames High is most fortunate in having an institution as close as Iowa State which permits the Ames Track Squad to use their indoor facilities. The use of the track is added incentive toward a good season. About fifty boys were out for indoor this year. The squad competed in the Federation Meet March 21 at Drake as well as the Outdoor on March 30.

MONTHS OF hard work; superhuman effort; and another potential record holder emerges.

Students work off frustrations through Intramurals, GRA

INTRAMURAL BOYS give their best for the ol' homeroom.

Taking the place of gang warfare in the Middle West is an institution known as Intramurals or GRA in its feminine form. Fighting it out after school in an endless variety of ways, the bossy compete in organizations with such romantic, West Side Story type names as 132-1 or 212-2. Uniforms vary from white gym shorts and black tee shirts to black gym shorts and white tee shirts.

In charge of the rumbles are Mr. Page and Mr. Smalling, who obviously enjoy the whole thing as much or more than the boys. Anyone not engaged in varsity athletics is eligible, and the homeroom captains spend a good part of many homeroom periods in recruiting. A running point total is kept, and trophies are awarded to gather dust in some alcove from then on.

The girls are organized on a more individual basis and are led by Miss Zanders. The greatest honor for a GRA girl is to hear her name read over the sound system in the list of GRA All-Stars.

People

"Summer was our best season: It was sleeping on the back screened porch in cots, or trying to sleep in the treehouse; summer was everything good to eat; it was a thousand colors in a parched landscape; but most of all, summer was Dill." . . . To Kill a Mockingbird

There are many memories from three years of high school: the tingling excitement of football that is heightened by the crisp fall air; the night before the research paper is due; the SPIRIT deadline; the prom. But these all fade and the morning fog that devours the world before the eyes of the watcher preys upon the mind, blotting out all memories save one: the people. A teacher that kindles a flame never to be extinguished; the comradeship of hard work; the joy of mutual discovery; the commiseration on Monday morning; the rereading of Macbeth to find Spot again; the hearing of the 1812 Overture: All these bring memories of people—a thousand of them—thrown together for three years in the same red brick building, with the same freezing gym classes and the same impossible Trig problems. And when the time is up, they find that they enjoy and respect nothing more than each other.

A senator from each homeroom gets a chance to participate in the unforgettable experience of attempting to organize the Senior Class of AHS. Graduation announcements and name cards had to be ordered, cap and gown measurements taken, ticket sales for the senior class play promoted, and baccalaureate and graduation exercises organized. The members of Senior Senate were probably the most deserving group to take advantage of the five day vacation for seniors in the spring. They met under Mr. Ritland's sponsorship and were led by Senior Class President Bill Nordskog.

JUNIOR EXECUTIVE COUNCIL planned moneymaking activities. Members included: B Moses (pres), D Dickson, D Bauske, P Marks, C Bliss, D Scandrett, M Hagge (sec), M Jenkins (treas), T Linder, C Warner, M Ritland (v-pres).

Juniors become Ames High's middle children

Looking through the junior class last fall, the members of Junior Exec could be easily spotted as the ones with the worried, harried expressions. They had problems—mainly money, money, money. The Junior Executive Council, headed by Brad Moses, had charge of the monumental task of raising eighteen hundred dollars for the Junior-Senior prom. Short of robbing a bank, the juniors undertook any project imaginable to raise the needed funds.

The first effort was selling mums for Homecoming. This was followed by a successful car wash and leaf rake. Then came the drive to sell student directories. Several new ideas were tried, such as selling note paper and sponsoring a faculty-student basketball game. The class play, always a good money-maker, was held in February. When the Prom had finally come and gone, the juniors could look back on a job well done.

MOSES LED JUNIORS to the PROM-ised land.

THE JUNIORS cooperated by raking; the weather cooperated by warming; and the leaves cooperated by falling.

Students share goals, gripes in student council

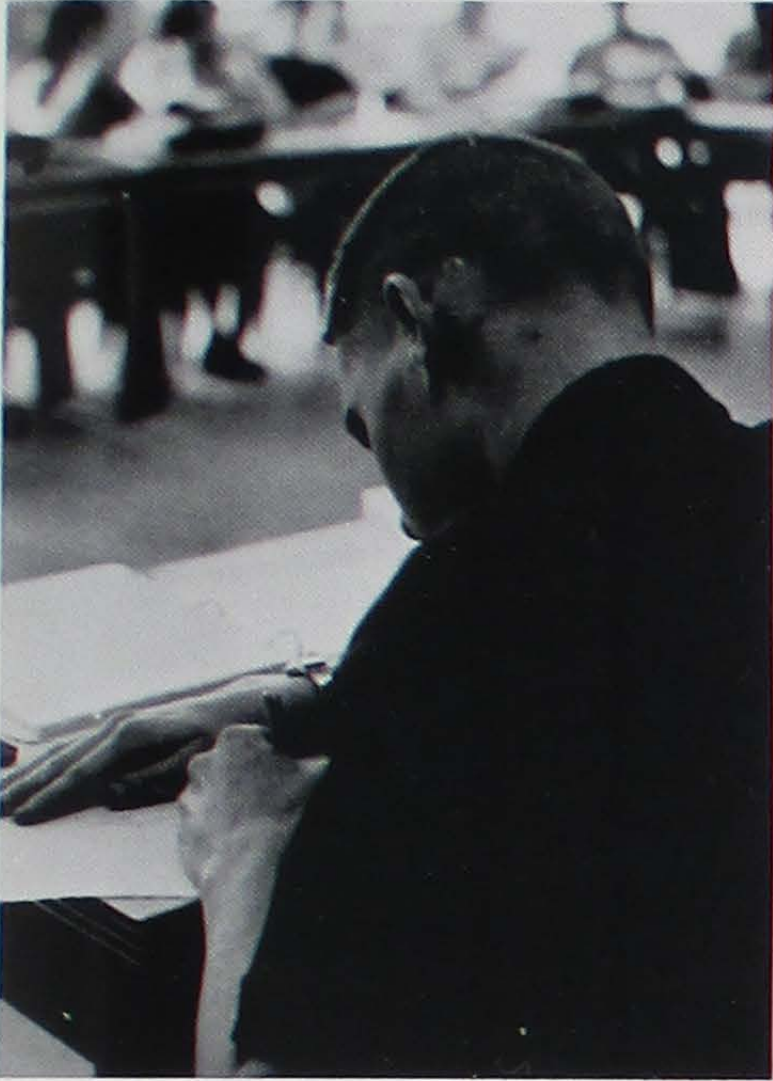

After the flash of glory during the campaign week, the new student body president settles down to the responsibilities and duties of his job, most important of which is leading the Student Council. A representative from each homeroom is awarded experience in learning the intricate facets of democracy, and also the chance to participate in the government of Ames High. From the homeroom to the president, to the council and back travel the complaints and suggestions that keep the school constantly moving forward. Besides this, the council also had the responsibility for several major programs, including Homecoming and Back-to-School Night.

Due to this organization, a contrast was established between the students and the administration that made life a lot easier for all; both students and faculty are indebted to this organization for the smoothness of operation that characterized '63-'64 school year.

STUDENT COUNCIL OFFICERS provided the motivation and leadership that made Student Council an effective organization.

STUDENT COUNCIL COMMITTEES provide an extra link between the Council and the students.

DAVID RECORDS the proceedings at the Student Council meetings.

Advertising

"It is far easier to write ten passably effective sonnets, good enough to take in the not too inquiring critic, than one advertisement that will take in a few thousand of the uncritical buying public." . . . Huxley

In the past century advertising has grown from a luxury to a necessary part of everyone's life. Advertising is based on a proposition of give and take. Without the profits received from selling ad space, television, radio, and most periodicals, including the SPIRIT, would cease to exist. But this is an interdependence that extends also to the advertiser. In the complex society of the twentieth century there is no time for the average citizen to sample every brand of breakfast food, clothing, perfume or gasoline, in order to decide which one he wants to buy. Nor can he expect to be informed of every new invention that goes on the market. He must rely on advertising. The advertiser has the tremendous responsibility of attracting attention, giving a sales pitch, and making a friend, all in the space of perhaps four square inches. Turn the page and meet the merchants of Ames, displaying their wares for the citizens of tomorrow.

Fain would I take with me all that is here. But how shall I?
A voice cannot carry the tongue and the lips that gave it wings. Alone must it seek the ether.
And alone and without his nest shall the eagle fly across the sun.

The Prophet

Dear Phil,

Well... to begin with it was real sweet of you to let me be the first one. Honest Phil & never thought you cared!

Phil, this has been one year I'll never forget, and any body in their right mind couldn't forget. So... Honest Phil some things have happened to me this year I would never dream of ever happening. There are so many things to even remember & don't even know where to start. These it all started the night up here at one of the St. Ames High Parties. They were always so swinging! Yeah, I'll never forget that night... Then we went to the Drive-in that Saturday night... Yeah, what was the name of that show? Weep, hell if I can remember. Then, weep, what was next ??? Well, then I remember the week-end that you took Carolyn out on a Friday night, then took me out on the following night which was Saturday. Yeah, that was the night after you ran into the tree down at Brookside, the night you got Carolyn scared half way out of her mind. That was the night you had gotten in a fight with your dad and couldn't get the car...

so we went to Deo movies with Tom Jordan. Remember that the night we wore black tight pants, white shirts, and black cut off sweat shirts. Remember those jeans
I had on? No... they weren't forever coming us, snapped. That was the night I had to be home at 11:00 and so on the way home you asked me to the Prom. Yeah. That night a storm was there, so I walked in the house that night and dad blew up and the storm. Oh well, I later found out that was cuz of Tom's driving, but he managed to give you all the blame. Oh well... then there was the night I went to the show with Janet... Oh yeah! I didn't go to the show. Remember? I went with you, and we went. — well, where did we go? No, I can't remember. but I remember asking you what time it was and you said 10:00, but when we got back to town we found out it was after 11:00. Yeah, we tell time nice. Well.  TAYLOR PUBLISHING COMPANY
"The World's Best Yearbooks Are Taylor-made" Phil, at least you tried. I have to give you that much credit.

Well, on our little walk time in the town there to remember but the next thing I remember is the phone. Excuse the change of our 'year the phone, that was the most interesting night 'Gung
I was as good as you came and got me at about 5:15 and I still want ready. And when I was ready I was working & was in my out of the down too I could have dreamed.
Pretty good supper was had there about 11 PM. Oh yeah. Let's see upside covered by a stairway meal, like came of ??? and well.
that all I know of year & don't suppose all was for get my feet, they feel so nice. And there others were so comfortable. You know what this? I should have want have lost the rest of the night. Why didn't I. Oh well. Then I remember very well that you got mad at me for no reason at all at the phone. Well, well for get that. (Don't mind)
Good thing I started at the back 'Gung' I had started at the You'll get along fine. I'm sure... Good!

I don't even want to stop writing you but since this is all the room I have left for you. So. again lots a luck to a great guy and I'll always remember you Phil.

Love Ya,
Donna

P.S.

Don't forget me
in Des Moines. Okay?

Thank for everything Phil and we'll forget the bad things we did. We won't forget you.
Thank you.
